I'm not saying i'm a big Ron paul person, but when I was following the last election debates and ron pauls messages what he meant by the neighbor thing is how the welfare state taxes the everyone/hard working and redistributes it to others. The welfare system has been around since the 1960's/70s but let's face it it's a failed system they did it to get people dependent on the government. didn't happen right away but over time it did..

That's just how he referenced it

He was against the welfare system but he didn't want to do away with it immediately he wanted to slowly wean off of it. Because yeah 40 years or so after the welfare system was put in people are very dependent on it now, so what's the solution? And if we keep it going, what happens if the system collapses or fails? all these dependent people suddenly don't have their checks.. i've been to rooming houses and places where people collect checks from the government and these people are in rough condition as it is.. I could see things getting violent that's all i'm saying
