Yeah I saw revolutions tonight. It was pretty great. Personally I thought the ending sucked, expecting a full explanation, maybe a nice big scene with humans and the machines sharing a beer would be sufficient, but it was a cliff hanger, I was expecting answers.

Oh, and I don't think the Matrix inside a Matrix idea is true. I thought it was all just yellow machine'y stuff, but if it was code, I think Neo see's everything in it because of that "wireless matrix jack" that someone mentioned earlier? If he lost his real vision, that little antenna in the back of his head still receiving feed from the matrix could give him positions of everything he saw in the gold code. That's how he destroyed all the sentinals in the real world too, kind of "hacking" into the matrix and killing them. Same with those artillery shells, I'm sure they'd have some kind of self destruct feature on them, they looked a bit more complicated then the classic metal n gun powder. The last scene with Neo being carryed away in yellow code? I'd say it was a 3rd person perspective of what Neo saw, remember, he had all that grand stuff that lets him jack into the matrix.

Oh man, my theory is completely boogus. Oh well, the Zion battle kicked ass.
