Hmmmm ... didn't want to get involved but I was nor have I ever been shitty to Crimson. I helped to support her in some bad times, but I got fed up of being attacked. I told her many times I have a clan to think of and they have to come first. I even overrided a vote by the other leaders on two occasions to not sever the link with her network. It seems that she has what she wants now and doesn't need FoD anymore. So be it.I don't really care where this ends up but the resolution will show what her priorites really are.

For the record, I never copyrighted the name forces of diversion Christine was kind enough to register the channel and domains in my absence. But it is strange of her to change the irc channel and point it to n00bstories.

FoD people I ask that you keep your responses to this thread moderate.

ACK I have the complete logs anytime you to see them there is more to it than those three lines.
