supaflyerit doesnt matter any ways westwood (or EA) has been messed up lately.

oh please.. shutup

hmm.. then check the InstallPath in the registry ,
There are two things you can do here:

1) In case the string DOES exist, double click on it and change the Path so that it does match your renegade installation folder.
I had this simular problem when installing the Renegade FDS onto a different drive after uninstalling it.

2) In case the string does not even exist, then you need to create it by doing this:

Right click and choose New > String Value
Rename the "NewString" to "InstallPath and then double click on it.
And enter the path to your Renegade.exe
(C:\Westwood\Renegade\Renegade.exe for example)

Its weird it doesnt work though, this should work always w hat i descibed earlier.
