

---

Subject: Hard Drives

Posted by npsmith82 on Tue, 02 Mar 2004 17:30:50 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

I also said i wouldn't fill my primary 60GB drive... but then i did.

So i bought a new 80GB, thinking i'd never fill that up... but of course i was wrong.

A secondary D:\ hard drive is extremely useful when it comes to formatting your C:\ though. No need to backup all your stuff to CD.

A few years back, i never thought i'd fill up my 3.2GB drive. Back then all you had saved were office documents, small images and a few websites. Just shows how things change with all the space intensive digital media we have today.

If i were you, i'd plan ahead and get one at least twice the size that you think you need.

If you want some decent answers to your question, tell us what part of the world you come from.

---