
Subject: The protests.
Posted by Carl on Fri, 21 Mar 2003 18:19:10 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Cpo64Quote: I also have a responsibility to support my president. I don't agree with it at all. HOWEVER, I support his decisions, because if I don't then it nullifies the whole meaning of this country.

Is this really the way you see things? I thought you had a 'Responsible Government'* If you don't agree with this decision, how can you support it? How does your not supporting your government nullify the meaning of your country? If that is so, that would mean that the entire populace of the USA is a group of political sheep, and I simply refuse to believe that.

Simply look at your recent past, the impeachment trial on Clinton, the US was not 100% supportive of his decisions then, but your country has not been nullified.

*The following link describes the Canadian version of Responsible Government. While I was looking for a clear description of Responsible Government, I came across a few articles that were

If that is so that explains much about how your government is run.

Now the link <http://www2.marianopolis.edu/quebechistory/events/resgovt.htm>

perhaps my statement was a little confusing on that point. what I was trying to say, is that I support our president until the next election to a certain extent. in other words, I have no choice but to support him until he is out of office. What would it look like to other countries if we didn't support our president at all? How would that PROMOTE democracy in any way, shape, or form?
