We had hoped so but... No dice... I think there were just too many of them and not enough fireworks. We were out in like a field type thing by railroad tracks so it had alot of space to spread.

lol also speaking of that engi. My dad hit a neighbor in the head with a firework once. lol... he was lighting one of those helicopters, and he though the little plastic on the bottom was supposed to be taken off, but thats the stand and makes sure it goes straight up. So he takes it off, lights it, the thing goes nutz for a second and shoots horizontal straight accross the street and pegs our neighbor. We were like Oh Shit! He just laughed though. No Coppers... lol
