Did you installed them properly?

http://dynamic6.gamespy.com/~renalert/index.php?page=downloads_patches
First you download 991, then 9915, then 992 and finally 9925.

By the way, they have a forum you know:
http://dynamic6.gamespy.com/~renalert/forum/

By the way, when patches get installed the installation might get slow or even stop, don't worry about that... Just don't close the installation window.

The reason that your installer isn't installing properly is because of your impatience. Follow this, it'll get RenAlert working perfectly.

1st: Make sure you download v991 and all THREE patches; 9915, 992, 9925. You'll need to install them in sequence, of course. The most likely cause for the runtime 9 error, which I experienced as well, is because you haven't installed the 9925 patch.

2nd: When the installer gets hung on always.dat, DON'T DO ANYTHING. Always.dat is a HUGE file which takes even the fastest computers a few minutes to open. It'll take forever starting off, but once it gets going, usually after 3%, it'll get back to speed.

You don't need any patches or ect., the installers work just like they are supposed to. Hope this helps.

SuperFlyingEngiYeah, it usually gets hung up for me on Always.dat

It's a 200mb file, it takes some time to update. Just let it run.

That runtime error is from not installing it properly. You must install all the patches in the correct order.

.991 > .9915 > .992 > .9925

All of those patches can be found on this page, and if you keep having problems post here.
