lol.. good job!

Looks like someone wasn't paying attention, at least to the keyboard, while they typed vto,,u kicwa n;sxrt = crimmy loves blazer that would mean that l = k and l = ; and e = w and e=r.

I'm not entirly sure you decoded it right. Could you explain a bit how you decoded it.

on my qwerty keyboard it goes like this:

vto,,u kicwa n;sxrt

the letter v left of it is the letter c

etc

Ok I think this is how it goes... First each letter of the phrase must be found on the keyboard and then you must select a letter next to it.

Then you have to unscramble the letters. If there wrong you go back to the first step and pci kanother letter next to it Basically for each word you can choose left or right... all letters to the left of the actual keys, or all to the right. You wouldn't change it mid-word, though.
