We ran out of our bandwidth (6GB) in 7 days. Then again, someone did it on purpose, but we still ran out of it.

Rather than asking how much traffic that is, you should consider how much traffic your site will receive- How big are the files which will be accessed by outside users & at what frequency? For example your signature alone is 42771mb (42gigabytes)...

My personal website is down for the whole month because I got real cavalier about hosting images & gifs for friends. (see here - :rolleyes: <http://www.freewebs.com/patsweblounge/>) Oh well, it's a learning experience for me as well as I didn't really know what bandwidth was before they temporally halted my site. It's like money - it's not growing on trees as I once thought...

Dedicated server? Wha?

Since I'm still a n00b to the overall internet, I must say that getting your own server is still the best option. Just run it 24/7, keep it in a closet or somewhere convinient where it can get the ventelation it needs, and run it using your internet connection. You can remotly connect to change the server and such. Of course, for this you need at least DSL and your ISP service must give you unlimited bandwidth, like mine

I run my server off of my Personal Computer using Abyss Web Server. Takes up less memory than Firefox, can run PHP, ASP, and Perl scripts (installation seperate) and is easy for most people to use. Also, it doesn't take up 20mb of space, it takes less than 1mb.

3gb is really nothing :S it kinda depends on what speed the internet will be your getting. If you get 3Gb with a 128K/64k connection, i guess you are less likely to exceed that limit than when your getting a 10m/2m..

My bwusage for the last few weeks, did a clean install of winxp recently so ..

"$6 per month for 250 Gig, Unlimited BW"
Which is it? 250Gb or Unlimited (FUP) ?

No such thing as unlimited bandwidth, its unmetered!

My website, which is a mere 3kb uses about 50 megs a month on the index page, weird - <http://www.killersmurfs.net> - popular domain it would seem

Then again i used about 3gigs a month in random linking and files - but i dont pay, so im not bothered.

Also i would pay monthly, not yearly, if you dont like the service, your kinda up shit's creek!

That only averages about 150GB a month. Our dedi has 1000GB. Oh, and I think you guys can all laugh at this: DarkDemin was insisting that a CS:S server would use MORE than 1000GB in a month.

When I got ADSL some 1,5 year ago we got 10GB/month, which I found to be just not enough.

Then a few months later my ISP decided to demonstrate the concept of "overkill" and made the limit 100GB. I did some calculation and when I use my connection's full capacity 24/7 I can use just over 50GB per month

Subject: whats a good bandwidth limit?

Posted by jjkuby on Mon, 03 Jan 2005 03:40:12 GMT

For renegade server you could run a server with 60 people,(or two 30 person) full 24/7 and still use under 1000gb/month. Renegade uses about 60 kilobits/sec/player. (so says westwood in the fds)

Everything is rounded for the sake of not using a calculator.

60k * 60 players = 3.6MB per second
3.6MB * 60sec = 216MB per minute
216MB * 60min = 1.3GB per hour
1.3GB * 24 hours = 31.2GB per day
31.2GB * 30 days = 936GB per month

Traffic Period: 0.83 Months
Traffic allowed per month: 1500.00 GBs
Traffic allowed for this period: 1500.00 GBs
Traffic used per month (avg): 260.23 GBs
Traffic used this period: 215.99 GBs

Don't think so

That's with 4 CS 1.6 servers (4 x 24), a CSSource server (1 x 40) and then IRC, Websites etc etc..

Still leaves me with ~1.3TB to toy with
