

My sister is a drummer (a very good one), I'll show her this later when she comes home. She might know a program.

Thanks

Has she got any recordings of her playing? I would be interested to hear some drumming by somebody other than myself.

hm, I've heard of this before, I'm not a drummer (I wish I was). But I'm a bass player. I know some people who play the drums. I'll also ask them.

I don't need to actually make the music I just need a program that will write down the tabs for me to save me doing it because I'm a lazy ass lol.

Thanks all.

My advice, hand write it.

I use sibelius, got a copy from my school, it still is faster for me to hand write my music.

What kind of kit you playing on?

I'm on an old ludwig 4 piece with powerstroke 3's and Zildjian custom A's and K's.

TAMA Rockstar Fusion 22 kit
22" Bass drum
14" Metal Snare
10" tom
12" tom
14" tom

14" Zildjian ZXT Titanium Rock Hihats
16" Zildjian ZXT Titanium Rock Crash
20" Zildjian ZXT Titanium Rock Ride
10" Zildjian ZXT Titanium Rock Splash
18" Zildjian ZXT Titanium Total China (not shown, but it's in the post :D:D:D)
Pearl Export Double Bass Pedal. (£180 worth)

Wonderful wonderful kit, worth £1300 atm

I've been playing for 2 years now. I have got a recording of me drumming about a year ago, using my MP3 Player to record it. Which is why the quality is shite.

My sticks are AHEAD custom alloy sticks. £30 for the pair , unbreakable sticks

Please note my kit doesn't live in the living room, that's just where I clean it occasionally. It actually lives in the junk room at the back of the house but it would look rubbish on a picture in that room lol.

My plans to expand my kit are:

An 18" Zildjian ZXT Titanium medium Crash Ride

Some K Customs (not decided which ones yet, I'll have to sample them first)

An 8" Tom

A 16" Floor Tom

About 4 Cowbells

And finally a belt hihat stand with pedal on the left and hihats in the middle-right kind of area (with K Custom hihats on).

The idea I had was to make a series of pieces of sheet music to be put on a website along with files of my recorded drumming. And to do this I would want it to be professional you see, so making it on paint would take up too much time.

The amp on the left is a Pevey
Guitar to right is Ibanez (Its name is vironica, vvvvv ironica
And my computer to the far right.

Also if you notice the large pedal, that is the "BIG MUFF" Pedal, Jimi Hendrix used this pedal (not this exact one) for purple haze, this however is not a "new fangled" remake, this was produced in the same year as the one he used

I'll post pics of my cabinet amp and bass later.

Yamaha guitars aren't too popular with people post-beginner level.

Kinda the same here.

My cousin got a guitar for his birthday but can't play/be bothered to play it.

So he gave it to me. A black "harmony" guitar strat copy but with a different head.

I wanna paint flames on it, restring it etc.

Then learn how to play it of course, but I'm concentrating on my drumming at the moment.

25 W amps are practice amps, they definately won't be any popular among people who gig.

slayer!m not a drummer (I wish I was)

Take some lessons if you want to drum. I don't think it's that hard.

As long as you have half decent co-ordination you can do pretty decent beats.

And co-ordination improves as you go along too. I could never do some of the things I do now if I hadn't taken lessons.

As the saying goes "practice makes perfect".

Well I play bass guitar for 3 years now. The point is that drumms take to much space, Which I don't have. So 3 years ago I started to play bass guitar. So, I stick with bass now

<http://home.planet.nl/~kuste389/PICT0007.JPG>

Here, I took a picture of my gear. It's not all of it though. I have another 1x15 200 watts enclosure at the place where I play with the band.

On the picture:

That black bass guitar is the one which I use most, it's a Spector NS 2000 Q4 pro. active emg picks on it. that other bass is my old one. a old crappy cort bass.

That speaker enclosure is a SWR goliath 3, 700 watts 8 ohms. a 4X10. I use that one too with the band where I'm playing in.

That pre amp above it is a SWR Black beauty. It's actually taken from a swr black beauty combo. I seperated the combo, So I have a head (pre-amp)+ 4 X10+ 1 X15. I seperated the swr black beauty because when you have to play onstage, you only need a pre amp. So I sperated it into 2 pieces, The pre amp plus that speaker. and later on I've bought that goliath 3 for more noise.

I don't play drums too much (my set isn't very good), but I play guitar more.

Thats a nice set you got there. Nice cymbals too. I prefer the ZBT though... Titanium ones are a bit too heavy for me. You really need to smash them to get something other than a ting sound. Or maybe you have the thinner ones?

Anyway for tabbing you can use Guitar Pro or Power Tab. Just google them.

Power Tab is free, but they are both about as good as each other. You can tab songs, play them back at any tempo speed etc. Theres a lot more features too.

They both support both standard notation and tablature. These work better for guitar, but it doesn't really matter. Just change the instrument when you are tabbing and it will sound right.

Does it tab music in text or in the proper fashion (as shown in the first post)?

Thx for those ideas, I'll take a look at them
