Guess who's new national past time is 'Voting'...

That's right, Iraq's.

Look how happy they are. I think this is panning out to be some pretty well instilled democracy. Hell their turn out was higher than ours.

Their turn out is higher, but it will affect them more directly. Makes sense.

That insurgent threat seems a bit immature to me.

I didn't agree with attacking Iraq, but thats done and over with, and Iraq needs these elections now.

And we see solid proof that the Iraqis are happy with what we've done... we're NOT "occupiers". The insurgents were so against democracy that they were willing to kill Iraqis who wanted it. Could this be any better proof that we did the right thing? Could this be any better proof that it's not the Iraqis who are fighting back? Could this be any better proof of the huge progress going on in that nation?

On the one hand, what I said was an in-joke.

On the other hand, he was telling people in the "Gay Bomb" thread that he'll be joining up with the military, far, far away from any action.

So once again I say that he's got quite the attitude for all these soldiers in Iraq, risking their lives daily for whatever cause they're fighting for this time [having had WMDs, liberation, oil etc], but when he's asked, like many... "pro war kids" to go and put his own life on the line, it's "sure... as long as I'm at least 200 miles away from any fighting, anywhere".

Not that what I say matters, not being American :rolleyes:

You should think serious about these things if you want to join the army.
I did that too before I decided to go to the army, (not the american army!!!! I'm dutch). I went to military testings one year ago, I didn't make it for the function I wanted to do. I was 16 at that time, and if I past the test. I had to wait untill the day I became 17 (I needed to be 17). I can do the tests again in about a month or so . I've been doing hell allot training. long distance running, weightraining, etc etc. 6 days a week. 1 day for resting and body "healing". I stopped computering because I dont have much time for it.

Funny thing that you should mention boats.

I find it fascinating that people say Jesus was the son of God, since you know that Christianity was founded on a myth, right?

As I'm sure you know that one Pope a while back killed an entire "race" of people who belived Jesus was a mortal, married father.

Oh, and in case you think I'm just pandering to your call for blasphemy...

Far as I can see, those two are true. I'll admit as of yet it's going on stuff I've read while on duty at school, so I can't paste links to it for your enjoyment,

Give me a bit of time to research it, maybe I'll even post a thread on it.

But I digress, since I can't miss a call to blashpheme.

I'm not saying you shouldn't think seriously about the army. What I am saying is that Cowmisinformed tried to get out of his claim to join the army for reasons that were getting slowly and more slowly towards what I said.

But if you end up in the army in 5 years, Cowmisfit, don't worry, you'll still get to see plenty of action in Iraq.

Why the fuck do you think that he needs to explain every intricate detail? Also, why the fuck must you always attack his intelligence? Is it because you don't have a point to make, so you use redderick to "burn" him? I figure that has to be it because you can't make any other fucking valid point.

First, he should at least explain detail that he used, not detail he inserts into something here and now to try and back up a point [Nice that he's started doing that.]

Second, that's the first time I've directly insulted his intelligence, don't know where you got the "always" from.

Thirdly, you're as guilty as anyone of simply attacking people without having a valid point.

Lastly, since I don't know what "Redderick" means I'll assume you mean "Rhetoric". I didn't think my use of language was enough to give me an edge in battle... hmm. I'll have to use it more often.

Yes, I've used rhetoric without making a valid point, but that's usually rare.

Oh no, I misspelled a word! Whatever shall I do? Now that you're going to use the English language in battle, don't think you'll be able to use it against me but once or twice.

a) Affects me in any way [Come on man, I've got less hair than I've been called that over the years... and I have more hair on my head than Aircraftkiller]
b) Thinks he can turn the whole forum against me by "revealing" that I'm bisexual.

Newsflash, kiddo. This is something called the real world, where intelligent people [I know, I know, you don't mix with those sorts and don't know what they think] don't actually care.

Hell, if it'd help you realise that there is no Taboo about it anymore, i'll put it in my signature.

I think it's very much a "vote now for democracy or forever hold your peace". All credit to them, they did. 60% turnout or something? That's amazing, when the turnout for OUR General Election

Lov thy neighbour? I think thats a term you took wrong when you decided you liked to bat both ways. It means love your neigboors however if they do soemthing wrong, and committed a serious sin such as murder someone, or have gay sex with guys (aka if you've actually DONE this , you've condemed yourself to hell, sleep tight) then well, that term flys out the window as far as im concerned. Somone like yourself though would take that ot the limit and say something along the lines of i dunno "Lets hug our enemy that has killed thousands of people around the globe for years, lets try and be PEACEFUL, lets show them our SOFT SIDE, because you know what the bible says, "love thy neighbour" " killed 100,000 citziens?? To save millions more yes. If you wern't such a fucktard and could relize the fact that the reason so many citizens in Iraq or Afgansitan for example have died is because the enemy IS IN THERE WITH THE INNOCENT, THEY PURPOULY GO TO PLACES WERE THEY KNOW IF WE ATTACK WE WILL KILL CITIZENS / PISS PEOPLE OFF SUCH AS MOSQ AND CITY NEIGBOOR HOODS. Mabey in your little fantasy world were everyone follows the rules and people dont' die, but in reality we like to say if you are a bad person we don't have to love you. Aka it is conditional. Aethist who believes in hell.

Thats sounds like something I'd expect a devout Christian to say. Do you know why (you think) they would burn in hell? Or do you just say that because you don't like gays?

Answer that directly please, I dont want to deal with some bullshit vague answer.

Umm. did i say i was Aethist?? Find that in the response, find it i dare you. I said IM NOT RELIGIOUS AS IN I DON'T STUDY THE BIBLE I DON'T GO TO CHURCH HOWEVER I AM A CHIRSTIAN. ITS NOT THAT FUCKING HARD TO UNDERSTAND.

Why would they burn in hell?? Well, i'd guess its because they are gay? they have sexual relations with that of the same sex, and it says in the bible thats a no no?

Javaxxcowmisfit!ve got an idea. Get a video camera (because i'd deffinitely like to see this) and go tell all of your freinds and family that you would love anyone who raped / killed all of them because you think its soooo wrong to hate and hate is bad 11111. Tell them. See what they say to you, enless of course they are all like you , then i sugest you all getting into a bus and driving off a cliff.

Jesus wouldn't hate anyone regardless of their misdeeds. I find Jesus to be someone that I would like to be like, so I will do my best to act like him.

ERrrrr, thats one i can't really say im against. YOu mean well, your just mis-guided in what ever far far far FAR FAR out tehre environment you've been raised in. Wow, i can't even fathem were crap like that comes from.

So you would call the father (who was also a pastor, I believe) of one of the murdered children in Columbine misguided because he chose to act like Jesus and not hate the two boys responsible for his child's death?

Coming from a Christian, to say that following (or the desire to follow to the best of one's ability) the teachings of the Bible is misguided is awfully... moronic?

You do not understand what "hate" means, nor do you understand what "condone" means.

Just because I refuse to hate an entire minority of people, or people have been foolish enough to murder, or any varient thereof does NOT mean I condone that behavior. Justice for such actions does not require (or even necessitate) any form of hatred.

Let me put this very simply: YOU DON'T GO TO HELL JUST BY SINNING. I'm not going to Hell and I sin all the time. Just as every other Christian on this planet. The only way you go to Hell is if you refuse to believe in the Bible and believe that God sent his only son to die on the cross for man's sins. Until you accept that and sincerely believe it, you ARE going to Hell. Other than that, if you do believe, you're guaranteed a spot in Heaven. No amount of good works can get you into Heaven. The Bible clearly states that. Also, it clearly states that you cannot get to Heaven without Christ in your life.

If you don't agree with everything in the bible, the best thing for you to do is sit down, revise it, cross out everything you don't like, and add in all the shit that you think should be there.. Then start your own religion and get some followers to give you some cash as a reward for teaching them your new enlightenment.. That's how all the rest came about, no reason not to do it again.. Maybe we can make it an MLM thing.

Look how happy they are. I think this is panning out to be some pretty well instilled democracy. Hell their turn out was higher than ours.

I'll blame you for causing this by using the word "hell" in your original post. Can't these people take their religion bickering to another thread suited to it? If it's discussion they want perhaps they'd find more on their topic of choice if it had its own place. I came into this thread to talk about Iraqi voting, as the title and first post suggest.

Earlier we had Cowmisfit and Dave rambling back and forth at each other about bisexuality and immaturity... Why don't you two just go make a topic "DaveGMM and Cowmisfit hate each other". Then you two can go to town without being bothered by any pesky topics of any importance.

I think this is an awesome step though with the voting and all. I think we've shown them that voting isn't so bad. They can choose however they want without having their family killed during the night. Maybe we'll get some good word of mouth and other countries will want us to come install them with Digital Cable. I mean democracy. lol

Also did anyone here about the Primeminister of Georgia? He was killed. Found gassed to death in a friends flat. Isn't that surprising? I wonder if they'll figure out if it was an accident or a more sinister act cause Georgia is another big topic when it comes to terrorism.

Well, if you say so.. I guess the only problem we have now then, is that James specifically contradicts John.. hmmm.... Maybe John was smarter, and therefore correct?

And just for the record, I would love to point out your wise, Christian declaration... It sort of sounds like this:

Lets think here for a minute.. Exactly what does it mean to believe sincerely that Jesus is the Son of God, was sent here to die for our sins, rose from the dead, and ascended into Heaven again.? If you sincerely believe it, don't you think that you would follow all his other teachings regarding the way he has instructed you to live your life? If you don't, if you just go about your merry way, and live the life that you want to live, have you really sincerely bought in to Jesus?

I'm not going to get in to a semantics debate about why my beliefs are better than yours, or vice versa, I'm just simply pointing out that what you are saying, is actually contradicting even your own words.. Luther was a very humble man, he lived as a monk and was probably closer to "perfect" than anyone I have ever met, yet he still felt torn in the fact that no matter what he did, or how he lived his life, he was never "sin-free".. But he came to the realization that, that isn't what God was asking for, he didn't require him to be perfect before he died, Jesus took care of that.. all Luther had to do was attempt to be like Jesus, as best he could, and that's all that Jesus required of him. When Luther understood this, he felt "born again"..

The Catholics of that era took it to one extreme, buying indulgences as repayment of their sins, sometimes even before they committed them. They felt that they could buy their way in to heaven through money or works... Now days, too many people believe the exact opposite, that all you have to do is profess your belief in Jesus, then you're free to walk away and act as you please.. What James taught, to build upon what those before him, such as John wrote; is that there is a combination of the two, that is required. If you confess your love to Jesus on Sunday, then spit on your neighbor on Monday, you're pretty much showing that what you did on Sunday had no true meaning. It's what's in your heart that matters, and if your heart is true, you will want to be out doing the works, and living the life that Jesus has asked you to. His suffering on earth isn't to be taken lightly, it wasn't a pass-go and collect $200 dollars card.

You can believe as you wish, I'm not going to change that; but at least consider what you're professing, God doesn't care how you really act, as long as you believe he died on a cross.. if that were true, there wouldn't be much need for repentance now would there? The goal in life for a Christian is to live a life closer to God, not just acknowledge he exists; there aren't too many ways to do that except for works.

msgtpainLets think here for a minute.. Exactly what does it mean to believe sincerely that Jesus is the Son of God, was sent here to die for our sins, rose from the dead, and ascended into Heaven again.? If you sincerely believe it, don't you think that you would follow all his other teachings regarding the way he has instructed you to live your life? If you don't, if you just go about your merry way, and live the life that you want to live, have you really sincerely bought in to Jesus?

I'm not going to get in to a semantics debate about why my beliefs are better than yours, or vice versa, I'm just simply pointing out that what you are saying, is actually contradicting even your own words.. Luther was a very humble man, he lived as a monk and was probably closer to "perfect" than anyone I have ever met, yet he still felt torn in the fact that no matter what he did, or how he lived his life, he was never "sin-free".. But he came to the realization that, that isn't what God was asking for, he didn't require him to be perfect before he died, Jesus took care of that.. all Luther had to do was attempt to be like Jesus, as best he could, and that's all that Jesus required of him. When Luther understood this, he felt "born again" ..

The Catholics of that era took it to one extreme, buying indulgences as repayment of their sins, sometimes even before they committed them. They felt that they could buy their way in to heaven through money or works... Now days, too many people believe the exact opposite, that all you have to do is profess your belief in Jesus, then you're free to walk away and act as you please.. What James taught, to build upon what those before him, such as John wrote; is that there is a combination of the two, that is required. It's my fault that I havn't articulated my beliefs well enough it seems. Of course, I mean that you should follow the rest of the teachings of the Bible. I'm just stating that even if you follow the rest of the teachings, but if you don't agree with John 14:6, then you've not secured anything more than the recognition that you were a caring and loving person.

I agree with you completely. I just didn't explain my side the way that I should have, either that or I wasn't even paying attention to what I was truly saying versus what I meant.

I never meant that you ONLY needed to follow John 14:6. I was just meaning to say that you NEED to follow John 14:6. My fault.

All of this fighting is bull-hockey. When you get up there and you see Jesus sitting with god and your like "SHIT WHAT WAS I THINKING BUDHA!?!". They're like, Hey there, We're christian. Want in? And as long as your like "Thanks man I was so worried" They'll be like "No prob bra, happens all the time". And then you can live in peace and happiness forever. I just hope I would get extended the same curtousy if I get up there and it turns out God is a golf club.

Now let me once again try to punt this on track.

IRAQI ELECTIONS

Guess who's new national past time is 'Voting'...

That's right, Iraq's.

Look how happy they are. I think this is panning out to be some pretty well instilled democracy. Hell their turn out was higher than ours.

I think it's clear from this thread that God wanted the elections in Iraq, no?

msgtpain Now days, too many people believe the exact opposite, that all you have to do is profess your belief in Jesus, then you're free to walk away and act as you please.

"To know the good, is to do the good" -- Socrates.

I would bet that God is a bit smarter than to accept mere profession to His son and His son's acts on earth. And I agree with you, many people today have bought into this false sense of security that God is some kind of simpleton (although God IS perfectly simple, but that is another debate) who will let you into the big Club Med in the sky with a fake I.D.

However, J_ball isn't quite off his rocker on this one. Redemption in the traditional sense has escalated from the Opus Dei and their corporal mortification to confession to an ordained priest who can magically make your sins disappear for 3 minutes of your time repeating X number of prayers that you may or may not even know the MEANING of. Which leads back to that quote...

If you know what the good is, and in this sense I don't think you'll misinterpret it like many others on this forum, then you will do the good (That isn't to say that is what Socrates actually meant, but the quote is deliciously ambiguous that way). And when you are aware of the good, you will genuinely know the wrong of your past ways and will be able to be redeemed for it because you will genuinely be sorry. Which is all you need to do with God to be forgiven. It's not some funky rain dance or anything, it will be a fully ego-driven conscious effort to be sorry for a misdeed and you will be forgiven.

Now ATONEMENT, that is a COMPLETELY different story.
