I need help with voice chat. I have a Logitech Internet Chat Headset. I downloaded Team Speak 2 set a button for talking made sure that the head set was un-muted (under volume settings and on the head set), I made sure the volume was turned up on my headset and on my PC. I can hear incoming voices but no one can hear mine I tried configuring the Headset but the only way it recognizes my headset is by me practically yelling into it!! Even then it doesn't even make it mast the yellow part (Under mic configuration). Please help me! Thanks in advance

Check your voice activation level in TS and your mic gain.

What really pisses me off is the voice delay I have when using teamspeak. I am on teamspeak everyday, all day, and by golly, it just pisses me off to say something and then have to hear what I just said 3 seconds later.

Well, I recently got a headset (also Logitech). I'm only using it for Battlefield 2 now...

Darn! I thought my head set was working! But it's still not! I sent some guy a message to come to my area in the chat room and I was speaking and he said he couldn't hear a thing I was saying!

First, is the channel in TS Moderated? If so, you need Voice rights to speak. Second, is your mic muted? Third, has he Muted you in TS?

check your mic for the little switch on it and make sure it is on not off. If you can't hear yourself talk into your mic no one else probably can hear you.

I made sure my Mic was turned on, both on my PC and my actual Mic. There where no TS moderators or anything. I'm most likely goin to return it. Unless someone can help before then.

When I say Moderated TS channel, I mean a channel that has M among the letters in parens beside it...
