these names shouldnt be allowed.

all it is showing is that your server is obvoisly bad. it also show's that your desprit for people to0 join..

it just makes me so angry theres like 30 servers like that.. every time i open game listings a00000000!! god damnit

it pisses me off so bad!!

i cant beilive unrules is doing it (LOL) - pitifull

yes alcline im saying this to you (6 people on the custome map server how pitiful even with an a000 name)

That's a tactic that I'm quite franky surprised hasn't caught on in other games. Naming your server so that it shows up first in the alphabetical listings...

I agree, it is annoying, but there's nothing to be done about it right now, and it really isn't anything more than a mild nuisance. Seriously...there aren't all that many servers out there, and if you're looking for one specific server it shouldn't take too long to find it.

At Jelly we rent a dual xeon 2.8, it isnt cheap to run. If we can find a way to help fill the server we will. We usually run the server as a 48 player and the majority of the time its busy. If Saying our server must suck because we use an a00 pisses you off then you really need to look at that, it isnt an offensive name in anyway, its just a fact that servers get more business when they are at the top of the list.

Look at n00bstories server, when they stuck to the original login their server was never that busy, period. They swapped to an a00 nick and that soon sorted itslef out. If players only seem to join the servers at the top of the list, can you blame server owners who pay $150+ every month for you to play for wanting a busy server ?

It's the same in business of any kind, if you put yourself at the top of the list so people can see you and you offer a good product like we do you will get more custom. It's just down to good advertising, in this instance its just putting yourslef in the public eye.

Just what would you have server owners do. Just stick to a login that sees their server empty, just to please people like you with petty hatreds of a nickname, or use a nickname which means they can justify paying out $150 + like we do ?

You think there's only 6 people in that server? you're sadly mistaken. I went in there when it said two people, and there was eight. It's a Westwood Online/GSA server, which means that the server can be seen in WOL and GSA, but WOL only tells you how many people using it are in the server.

Uh..what's the big deal about some stupid server names...

I myself play on one specific server every time (unless it's empty, though it rarely is) and if so, I check the pings and choose my server from there.

Though, what I'd like to see is something where you could sort the servers by the amount of players the DO have in there. NOT the amount of players there CAN be. I mean..what's the point in that really? You aren't going to join an empty server, which can hold 164 players just because it says so.

Supply and demand. They are simply catering to the fact that most gamers are "lazy". Most gamers "cant be arsed" to expend the effort to SCROLL or actually spend 3 seconds processing visual input to find their favorite server, so they are more likely to join a server that is on the first page, especially near the top. They just want to play, NOW. That means click see list of servers and click on the first one that smacks them in the face.

Why a000000 names could possibly cause offence is beyond me.

It doesn't matter why a player first joins a server, if they like it they'll play there often, if they don't they'll find a different server. If a server with an a00000 name has retarded rules, idiotic moderators etc... people won't go back there just because it has an a00000 name. Flawed argument

There isn't anything fair to be had with the a000 phenomenon either. You all complain about spending so much money on your server that you must get "top of the list" to make it worthwhile for you. What about those who spend just as much money as you, but have the audacity and 'sportsmanship' to keep to a normal name, whilst your servers reap all the players? I suppose it's up to them to get an a000 name, where you in turn get a better a000 name to boost yourself in front of them again. How can you possibly call getting an a000 name fair and considerate to other servers is beyond me, and I think the thread starter has every reason to complain. YES, it's annoying. YES, it's annoying enough to post a topic about it. YES, you should all quit doing it and get some big cojones. What's probably more annoying than seeing the a000 names is how all the a000 owners think we should stop complaining about it. wtf? We're the fucking players they're after...

This is true up till a certain point, and then it doesn't matter. Generic servers need A0000 names, heavily customized servers don't.

E.G.

Black-cell servers don't need A000 names, their server is unique. ZUnnies Co-op doesn't need these either.UN New Maps doesn't as well (I just simply choose an A0 name to have both GSA (yes GSA needs an a000 name...)+New Maps close together in the listing)

Its when you have servers which are clones of each other they need to compete for players. Most server owners have no choice but to do this to get players, even though people who are lazy to scroll down are n00bs.

As for its lame, well get used to it, or make it so that the server listing isn't sorting by player but by PING in game players. Btw ingame player thing will kill wolspy players, because on the listing the xwis server doesn't report any renip/ase/gamespy/directConnect players in game, which is why you see 6/40 on new maps in the listing, but when you join the channel their are like 34/40 or so players. Wol players are stupid and dont' bother downloading anything new, hence 70% of traffic on new maps is from places outside wol.

This is the server list now:

This is the server list when we were on WOL:

I can't find any reason for the high ping. I assume the 996 figure signifies a timeout, but I don't know why my server is timing out on the ping when it didn't before.

What he says^

Last time I had green ping's was before the takeover. I think it was Feb2003 That's when I would see pings varieing from 26 - 120
Now a days. I'm talking the last 2 years even my own server would show up a with a 150 ping while it's 60-120 ingame ish.

And I haven't seen a green maybe once in a blue moon.

I was really happy when I saw the 0 ping's in the server list at the start of xwis.

What about a firewall, if configured right it blocks ICMP? or if you let them trough wouldn't that really show the actually ping? Let's assume your behind a hardware firewall/software. It blocks the icmp request therefore giving it 0 ping/999?

I am just wondering because if I have it to block ICMP I will get that kind of pings too :/

Well i think the only real way to get past the a000 naming shit, is not to be so damn lazy and scroll down.. When i play on WOL which is maybe once a month.. I never go on a a00 name o look for a server that has maybe 5-15 players already there.

All you gotta do is find your fav server and just ignore the others. I dont play on MP's aow server because i think they have modded the game to much.. I do play on there CO-OP and sniper. It's just the matter of fact what server do you like to play on.

Wouldn't it be better if it sorted by the amount of players actually IN the server? Not the amount of players the server can (supposedly) handle..

Yeah only one problem with that

With XWIS it doesnt show how many players are actually in the server if there are players from GSA,ASE or Direct Connect in the game aswell.

So you might have a server that is WOL only which has 8 players (being the top of the list)

And having a server that only has 3 WOL players but the server actually has like 40 players and that gonna be at the bottom of the list.

We've already been through that idea. Want to see how it ends? Let's say there's a rule that your server name has to reflect your community name. Well, then that makes communities like "All-gaming" and "Aaron's Hut" get to be at the top of the list. Is that fair? No.

The fair solution ranks the servers based on something out of their control.

LOL rank them on the number of players that are currently in. That's more or less out of your control. Ow no, wait: then people will stay in there and idle until it fills up which is pretty bad too. Forget that...

And the player counts are wrong for servers that use GameSpy.

And by the way, my server is full pretty much all day long with 40 players. I use an a00 nick. There are hundreds of people who will disagree with you thinking that my server sucks. a000 may get them in but a quality server with a good staff KEEPS them coming back. Plus I have a very large gamespy following, often over half of my players are from GSA. They are unaffected by the 'a000' nick that I have in WOL.

I agree: it helps tons to have a good, faithful amount of players that first look at your server before looking at another. When I go in ours, usually 5-6 players quickly join in (only WOL: we do not run WOLspy): mostly players I know and that play there often. Why? I think it has something to do with the fact that we have no modification to the original Renegade, except for !donate and with the fact that we have very strict modding (yes: many players like to play somewhere without swearing/insulting and where they understand everything that is said). It helps ofcourse when the server is a clan-server with many players and if it's hosted with a title "www.n00bstories.com" which is very well known in the community. The only real condition for this to work is to have a quality server which has stable pings and sfps/kbps.

I've used GameSpy since the Renegade demo. I've never liked it. I don't particularly like Renegade's WOL interface (IMO, Tiberian Sun and Red Alert 2 did a much better WOL interface). I definitely like it better than GameSpy, however.

I have an idea, but it would require alot of the server owners working together on this to make it be fair...

Each community is allowed to put there most ~popular~ server at the top with like a nick name like "Ajellyserv" or "An00bstories" or "Axphaze" and then put the rest of the servers with a normal server nickname or like Bservname.

But like I said it would require alot of the server owners working together to do this.

At least the names on WOL don't change, or very rarely. On my GSA playerspy list, there's a number of people that have changed their name so much that I have no clue whom they are, or used to be.

I thought of this, too. Something like having the community vote on servers, then we would all encourage our communities to vote for us and whatnot. But I don't think there's any fair way to do something like that.

Considering that most players have no idea of the community, that would hardly be fair too, as you say indd. Maybe the most fair way is still how it's done: the first/fastest one gets the top.

After reading all this rant I am convinced the thread starter is a little kid trying to run a 4 player dedicated on his cable modem and no one is joining it because its to small and he his lack of a00 skillz anyway, You want a true method of being fair? Then server should populate on the list at RANDOM, completely random Then you have no idea who is on the top. Thier should be a way of marking favorites so if you want to join a particular server you can hop on to it without searching.

Their! Problem solved

I think your onto something. With all the things to be concerned with, work, school, girls, the price of fuel, this isn't even on my radar screen. I don't know why you would need to look at the host list, unless your looking for a buddy that you are not sure you want to join.

I personally think that for a server to be sucessful, you need to have a good following.

Take these servers: UNRULES, n00bstories, NOn00bs, n00bless, MP-Gamers, Jelly-Server and a few more i cant remember right now. These all are large reliable servers with a experience in running servers for Renegade. That is why they are brimming with players, NOT because of a "a00" name. I bet if n00bstories server was at the bottom of the WOL/XWIS server list it would still be almost, if not full!!

They have built up communities as well for there own servers. And that helps a lot in player count.

My advise is to not worry about getting a a00 name. Just adivitise your server, Launch it on WOLSPY to attract gamespy players as well, build a forum/community. Maybe have a quirk for your server that makes it unique and not just another "OMGUBERL337 AOW Server".

Just a few ideas.

Ok here is the deal..

Its like advertising, You want to be seen and heard off. Up to me, I would make it so that the large servers were always the top 6...Zunnie would have to shrink his battalion of servers to 3-4...

Un runs a new maps server, that really isn't competetion for most people, but they higher up the name shows in listings the more likely somone is to go to our site and download the maps.

GSA is a vanilla server, running no mods like special weapon drop, weather, new crates e.t.c. Its meant for those people that play in clan matches where stuff like this is turned off. I figured with all the SSAOW server out there, a stock server running original renegade would be nice.

As for a00 names, I have seen other servers, they all fight for getting top space; its just the way it is and people should stop complaining
