We didn't get a Christmas tree. We have a Christmas table decoration, made out of a raped wreath. ^_^

You can also see my L33t PlanetCrimson logo on the wall to the right. Mine is also a cell phone picture so it's not that great.

I'm not at my house to take a picture of our tree, so I drew one in MS Paint instead. =D

I don't know why yet but my family has decided to go with a smaller fake tree this year.

For the past 10 years, our family has not had a tree, instead we have built a Christmas cross each year, to symbolize the meaning of the birth of Christ. anyhow they started out simple but in the past 5 years we have started putting scenes in them and really going all out on the thing. takes usually about a month and it really looks neat. no cam or i would show you all these years.

You celebrate Christmas with a crucifix? Sorry, but that just makes no sense to me. If you built a manger or maybe a star, then it'd make sense, but a crucifix? Birth != death.

I don't do Christmas at my house. I have to do Christmas twice a year. Once for one side of my family on Christmas Eve, and the once for the other side on Christmas. Eventually after having to do one side, come home, sleep, do home Christmas, and then go and do the other side, we decided we were through with it. Much better to get stuff all through out the year than to stop getting anything around August-ish, and then get it in mass at Christmas.

I've never understood the obsession with crosses by Christians.. I would think that a crucifix would be the LAST thing he would want to see when he returned.. In fact, I bet he will cringe every time he looks at one.. I would.

If you really want to remember his sacrifice for you.. smear blood all over your house and body.. the suffering for man's sins occurred in the garden, not on the cross.

Are you stupid? The agony in the garden was Jesus asking God to let him not have to die. "He suffered and died on the cross so that our sins may be forgiven."
