Here is how my desktop normally looks, barring of course the strategically positioned Purdue hat and copy of C&C:TFD.

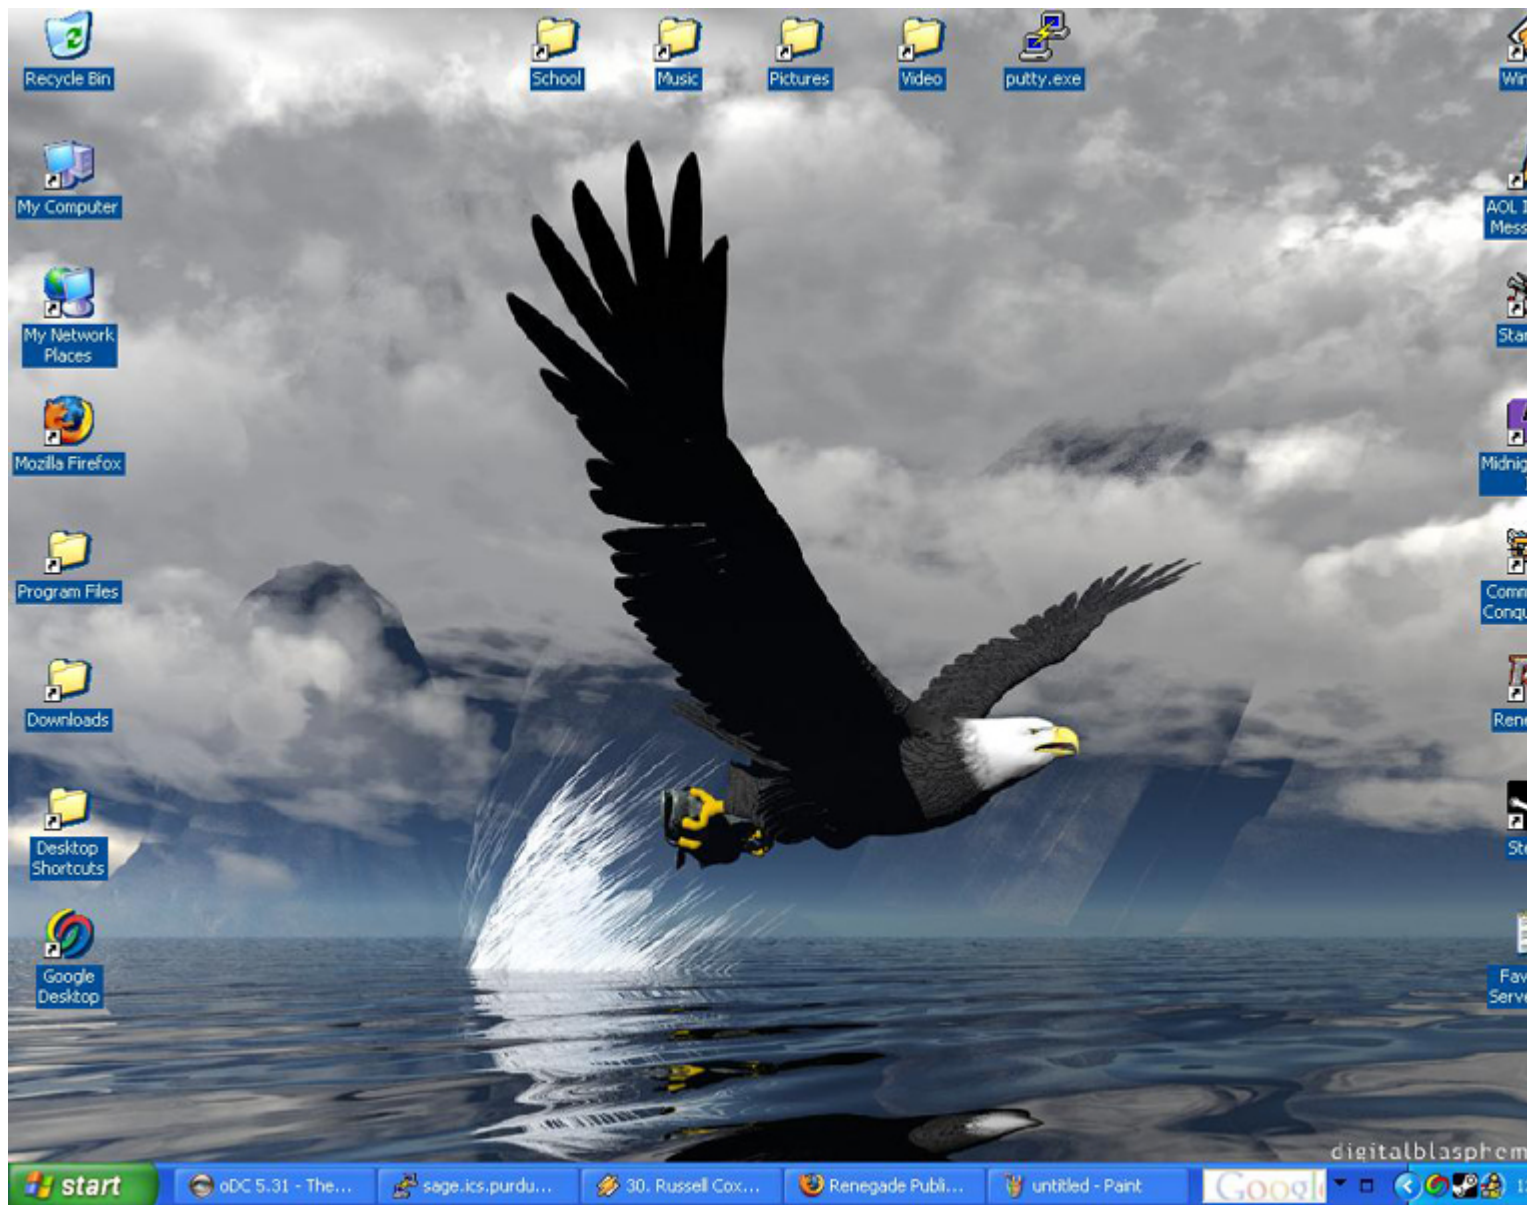

And my wallpaper (changed it very recently so it doesn't match the first picture):

Thank you Sir!

Too bad my PC is getting so outdated =/

1.8 GHz Intel Pentium processor

1024 MB DDR RAM

ATI Radeon 9800 All-In-Wonder Pro 128MB video card (not really that impressed with it, TV tuner has lots of issues, and video performance isn't near what I was expecting)

She runs Renegade real good (less when a flame tank gets in my face, big time slowdown there!) but yeah, my accessories are way nicer than my tower.

Running a 19" LCD monitor

Cordless Logitech Media keyboard (very good keyboard, had it 3 years, and still haven't replaced the batteries)

Cordless Logitech MX-Laster mouse (best mouse I've ever had, batteries last forever, and it is extremely accurate)

Sound system involves the two PC speakers on my desk, and a 360 watt sound system in my room. Got all the speakers arranged for the perfect sound balance, the two speakers on the desk project so the sound seems to come from the center of my monitor, and the woofer stereo system back behind provides awesome surround sound!)

Tower is down beside my desk, it took up too much room, and made way too much noise before.

I don't know who I stole this wallpaper from, but I like it. My desk is too messy to include. I like Doittle's desk the best, reminds me of home. Why did comrade and nineball pick on rubi? A $400 dual core processor for a gaming pc isn't impressive. Although, building a pc for $1500 does impress me. I see $1100 in just 3 items, plus PSU, MOBO, tower, cooling, HDD, maybe another HDD, OS, optical drives, sound card, and $8 floppy drive. Don't forget the floppy drive. Also, a new keyboard and mouse. I'm surprised the wireless mouse is so popular. Kanezor, why so many s-video connections? Crimson, Is that a Tornado table in your office? Seems like the noise would be too much for an office environment. Love the sound of a ball hissing across the table then slamming into the back of the goal. My wrist hurt just looking at it.
