The dog is most likely a mutt, probably a mix between a golden retriever and a labrador. It sure as hell doesn't look like any pure breed I've seen.

well i suppose i will never know, i am not joining a forum to ask one question.

at the moment he is still a puppy. but i dont think he is a "usual" bread because he has very soft fur and the hair on his back is very course.

Border Collie mixed, Its often hard to see a one of the two dogs in a mix but this is what a border collie generally looks like:

Australian shepherd-like but usually a little on the smaller side.

It may have some wolf mixed in it if you don't know its origins. Nodbuggers dog is a like sheep dog / wolf mix if I remember right. It has eery eyes.

I'd have to agree. I have a labrador (not purebred, but pretty close) and the dog's eyes in that picture look just like my dog's eyes.

lol, i had a pure breed border-collie but unfortanetly he had to be put down i am swinging at the idea that he is part border-collie but what dog has ginger hair(exept mine lol).

i will take a picture later, he is sleeping right now.

Yeah i saw border collie in his face and general build, there are only 2-3 colors of border collie and this isnt one. For sure a mix, does the length of his tail hair, get longer closer to the tip? That would indicate golden retriever, but he has the coloration of an aussie, or a spaniel.

the answer to that is no, he has longer fur at the base of his tail.

also when he runs he runs with his tail up, this is not border-collie style if i can remeber right. he is a very good stalker, he can catch count-less amounts of birds. and also he is built for speed rather than stamina he has very powerfull back legs.

one last thing, he would not lead a pack but he is a very good pack-member. and will defend(against other dogs) anything he has his eye on.

The dog reminds me a bit of a dog we once had in looks and his behaviour. Can't help you with the breed or mix of breed though since that dog was a mutt that was found.

Nice dog anyway.
