If you are on NOD's team and have some good skills, it is actually possible to walk a mammoth into their own base! a mammoth tank can hardly shoot behind or beside itself, so it's much like a harvester walking with more of a challenge to it. Often using an SBH would be the best idea so the pilot hopefully doesn't see you to attempt to squish you. But, if they are a suber noob, you might be able to do it without a SBH! It's easiest on maps like field, under, or walls. As well you should always take advantage of the bulkiness of the mammoth. If you are trying to take it out with infantry try sticking close by it to hassle it. This also works with aircraft. And occasionally buggys if the main cannons get stuck in the cockpit, and if they don't use the TUSK missiles.

there are such stupid people around?

Yes a mammy is big. is bulky but hey... a nod infantry right left or right of him and he didn't see it? ouch... it's possible related to game mechanics but in real combat impossible. Even the most stupid fragwhore would spot and kill you...

isnt it a bit too much of a gamble, to do anything worth while you will need nuke so you are going in with 1400 credit combo and just hoping that mammy doesnt decide to suddenly stop... or doesnt get bumped, ive done something similar to this b4 but that was i wanted to die and thought it would be funny... it was fine till hotty came to repair mammy and saw me... stick to harvy walking mate.
