Yeah I agree...if people want to use this forum, then they better agree to EACH AND EVERY rule or get the hell out.

Sorry to be rude but this thread is a perfect opportunity for me to thank Crimson and the BHS staff on their great efforts to keep this great game alive.

Without their efforts, this game would be good as dead...of the many forums I am a part of, I can say this is the best and well-kept of them all.

And to those who hate RenGuard:

No one knew global warming was this serious, until Al Gore made it up.

Thats a joke on TV i heard, cracked me up....but yes, all this typing Crimson is doing is causing massive exhaustion WHICH then causes Crimson to pant heavily, this panting causes a reaction which makes her gasp for oxygen, thus obtaining her oxygen, she exhales c02 which raises into the ceiling of her house, once massive amounts have built up, they soon slowly exit the building and reach the environment, thus creating massive holes within the Ozone layer which causes a .0001 degree rise in temperature. After all these studies and details were discovered, many scientist noticed, to solve global warming and not spend 500 bijillion more on claiming global warming was because of cars, they decided to spend 50 dollars and filter Crimson's house so c02 wouldn't escape...problem solved and the sun shines....unless your in japan and your sleeping.

Wrong gamemodding CH4 is the cause of the heightened UV radiation by causing the holes in the ozone layer, CO2 is the main human produced gas that can theoretically cause global warming.

Odd, my GCSE Science textbook marks Carbon Dioxide and Methane as the two main contributors to global warming.

Subject: Re: Watch out - Crimson is causing global warming!

carbon dioxide(CO2) is produced by man when burning mostly gas and methane. CH4 is mainly a biological byproduct produced by the process that devours dead plants and animals.

As such you can't mark CH4 as a human product. However the highly pressurized version used in old spray cans has the nasty habit to get up into the higher layers of the atmosphere and react with Ozon(O3).

I wasn't talking at all about global warming.
I was talking about the gases crimson releases.

Yes, CH4 contributes towards global warming. However, since it is a hydro-carbon it has a limited supply.

Natural events such as earthquakes and volcanic eruptions release far much more toxic and "green-house" gases than we ever will. Since we are already in an ice-age, i think the effects of this is going to make it far worse. I think, when the climate becomes warm again, man will die out. However, since the earth shifted orbit further away from the sun shortly after (afaik) the asteroid that killed the dinosaurs (larger than 5Kg) i don't think that will happen.

This isn't an ice age, this is the stage just before the Dino's where the temperature was moderate to high.

The dinos, then got into some nice warm heat, tropic heat, higher then what we see today...roughly around 55-60 Celcius.

And hes right, A volcanic eruption makes more toxic gas and pollutants then we can in twenty years.

So figure this out-

25 eruptions a year, underground mostly, with 1-2 above ground.

50-100 big earthquakes a year, most of which underground, but still release gasses.

Thats a shitload of lifetimes.

Im not saying we're doing our part to help, but what we're doing isnt exactly killing us to quickly either.

Maybe by a few years...yea.

The fact we are in an ice-age is an opinion. The polar ice caps didn't exist at the time of the dinosaurs so i class this, as an ice-age.
