I have recently re-formatted my Dell PC running windows XP, after fully updating etc.. i tried installing renegade, everytime i run the setup.exe i get an error;

Technical details;

I am using a 'sold out' version of renegade on disk.
I have tried running setup.exe in compatibility mode,

please help if possible,
thefriggi.

Maybe the cd or cd-rom drive are broken?

Go to regedit
Go to HKEY_LOCAL_MACHINE\SOFTWARE and delete the renguard instance.
Go to \WESTWOOD from there and delete the renegade instances in the registry.
Happened to me but this seemed to fix it.
Don't do anything if there is something doughtful about my post as the wrong registry deletion can render xp useless.

That will make XWIS scream "invalid serial" as you won't have an entry of one...

no. Thats if you edit the serial. If you delete the entries they get re-created when you install. If you uninstall properly the entries would be deleted anyway.

The reason you think that is many have tried putting their serial straight into the registry, but it is encoded first when you install it.

If you still think that will make XWIS scream ask me how i am still running renegade.
