Yes, they obviously cheat. I mean, 50 touchdown passes is EASY to get when you cheat. Whether or not they did anything wrong during the game, they still have kicked complete ass. Go Patriots.

Also, they're in Boston.

Heh, they may have broken the rules - But they've proven they don't need to. They kicked all manner of ass this entire season, and if they win then it's well deserved in my opinion. Since I really don't care at this point who wins, I guess I'll be rooting for them. F-you 79' Dolphins.

Now if only the Lions could capitalize off of a 7th round pick like New England did...Hell, I'd like them to capitalize off of a 1st round pick Jecht, what do you have against the 10-6, 1979 Dolphins? I'm sure you mean the 1972 Dolphins.

Packers were so close to getting there. And about 80% of the team players are rookies. I can't wait to see what happens next year.

EDIT: im going to be doing something more interesting than watching the super bowl. Packers aren't in it.

Both teams sucked. Everything Manning threw was a lob that was hardly what one would consider a performance by a "Super Bowl" quarterback. Brady wasn't at his best, either, but he had a decent excuse in that his offensive line didn't know how to protect the pocket.

Then the officials wanted the Giants to win. They let a couple turnovers go unnoticed. They called the one Burress fumble an incompletion, which wasn't the easiest of calls to make, but since it was ruled incomplete, the call couldn't have been challenged. The second turnover was correctly called a fumble, but the refs picked their asses and let the play continue for 10-20 seconds AFTER the Patriots lineman recovered the fumble and was down.

I'm not one of the types of people to bitch about the officiating because there were some arbitrary calls/miscalls that "decided" the game. These two turnovers could have been HUGE momentum boosts for the Patriots. Plus, more time in the Patriots' hands could have meant the game.

I'll give credit to the Giants, though. They deserved to be in the Super Bowl.
