Here's a list of all of his topics between the beginning of the Mod Forum and today.

Creating a cave(inner and outer) in g-max harvester is going the wrong way
renx question....attaching or welding to boxes together
Max speed in humvees and buggys

compute vertex solve

It's completely out of line. The purpose of the Mod Forum is to help you learn, not have everyone teach you how to grow up, eat food, ride a bike, etcetera.

We don't need him spamming questions over and over when he can easily read a tutorial on how to do something. There are at least 15 tutorials on how to do everything in Renegade and he has yet to look at them, and if he has, actually understand what they mean.

I'd appreciate it if some action were taken, as this becomes incredibly annoying as time progresses.

I noticed when importing the old Mod Forum posts that he had some posts on the old forums too. I really don't think he is TRYING to spam, but I certainly agree he should read some tutorials before asking questions about every single little thing. If it really is so hard for him, maybe he should just concede that map making is too difficult for him. It's no shame, everyone cannot be proficient at everything.

He could just make a general thread like "Help me with Renx!" and post all of his Renx problems in there. But that would be the smart thing to do...

But yeah, you go to the Mod Forum to get help on how to do this stuff, not to get taught, there's a difference. Getting help actually requires you to do most of the learning on your own.

(Oh, btw: Remember it's "Et Cetera", not "etcetera".)

The word spam refers to unsolicited or irrelevant posts. This is a Renegade Public Forum and most of those posts are about Renegade, so they are not unsolicited or irrelevant. An example of spam would be someone posting a link to a non-Renegade site like a Get-Rich-Quick website or posting a page full of smileys to get your post count up. Excessive amounts of posts may be annoying or unnecessary, but just because you don't want to read them does not make them spam.

Indeed the Mod forum is for helping others mod Renegade. the number of posts made by Titan1x77 are annoying but he is asking for help, he's not always posting unnessesary things like announcing a release in the mod forum, which ACK even you are guilty of.

Guys maybe it might be wise to add a sticky post at the top of the mod forum or headlines like on the old WWS forums to modding resources? When people do ask a lot of questions similar or easilt answered we normally see the same people posting links to their tutorials in response to the persons question. The post should include the most common modding resources that people may find useful. I can list a few that i can remember that may be of use to start the post off:

RenHelp 1.9
Stonerook's FAQ
<http://www.laeubi.de/tutorials>
<http://www.nodnl.net>
<http://www.wildfiregames.com/insurrection/tutorials.shtml>
<http://modx.renevo.com/forumdisplay.php?s=bdabf0909523fcd9604607a4c3a2332d&forumid=10>

Dante, you may want to set the Mod Exchange to show all posts instead of the ones from the last 30 days as this hides some of the useful stuff and unless you know they we're there you would think that the ModX has decreased in size.

You said posting about one's mod, or about the release of one's mod was against what the Mod Forum is for. You said it was only for asking help. When in fact it is for everything that has to do with Renegade modding.

I don't have a problem with intellectual debates, or even a mildly heated argument where someone is calling the other an idiot. But mindless flaming using words like "faggot" and whatnot is obviously nothing but an insult war, which is best carried out in PM instead of public. I warned Vegito several times about his behavior, and he even jumped on me about something, and I ignored it instead of engaging him. Now that he has turned 3 other threads into nothing but an insult war he is banned.
