lol, that was made public knowledge, I downloaded cheat name removed to see if the new anti-cheat device actually worked. Obviously it did and didn't at the same time. Threw up way too many false positives.

Don't go thinking you have struck gold. Many people know I am still a member of UC, I just changed my name from XeonTeam, to XeonXR6.

The motorbike cost me £1,450. Got a great deal for it being 11 years old! 6,500 Miles on the clock!

Just gotta hope for some better weather so I can get out and ride it more.

Cheers, Andrew.

That's a sweet ride.

What would one of those cost if it wasn't used? Future investment hopefully

A brand new GSX-F would cost you somewhere in the region of £6-7k. I don't know if I could part with that sort of money, lol.

Should have got the GSXR-600 you'd get 25% more HP for the exact same engine

Nice bike however, once I past my full license I am looking at getting either a VRF-400 or a RVF-400 140MPH is more then quick enough for me lol, the gold colour is my favourite!

The 25% HP gain, bumps the cost of the bike up around 100% more and the insurance premium around 400% more.

Don't forget, I'm 19, insurance companies in the Uk would not touch me on a GSX-R (Gixxer).

Andrew.

Edit: This GSX-F will easily push 140. Gg... lol

Yeah the R would have cost you more. 140MPH from a 600.. I should hope so as well. Please do tell me how you get insured for a bike that you dont have a license to ride. As you say, you're 19. Therefore you're restricted to any size bike with a maxium power outlet of 25kW that also has a power to weight ratio of 0.16kW/kg

The last time I checked the the F produced 55-62kw...

lol, I said "it would" push 140mph.. not "it does".

I have had to have a restriction kit placed inside the carburettor (a few washers) to reduce the power to 25KW.

This really only affects the top end of the rev range and, the bike will easily destroy most cars off the line.

Gg.. lol

Edit: My licence

So you've basically restricted a 600cc bike to a 250... You would have probably been better off with a CBR250.

I disagree, the 600's acceleration from a standstill is far better than that of a 250.

The main reason I bought such a large bike is because of my height.

I would have looked silly on a 250cc.

Yeah a normal 600 will obviously beat a 250 hands down but what im saying is, now that you've restricted your 600 to 25kW its now basically a 250 since most 250 produce around 22-28kW mark. So now you basically have the power of a 250 but the weight of a 600.

I can only feel a difference in the bike at the top end, 9-11k rev range. Other than that, the bikes acceleration is just fine, .

Got a great deal on the bike, so i'm happy, lol.

I'm 6' 9(1/2)", I could never fit on a 250. If I could, I would look silly.

Yeah you're right, a 250 would look pretty stupid with your size. I prefer your uncles ninja though..
Where did you go to ride it?

From their house on the outskirts of Gainsborough we rode to a place called Willingham Woods (kinda the place bikers go) - Here.

The journey has some great corners in it. (located here)

All in all, was a good day out.

Andrew.

Seriously, go for it! You'll love it.

Only thing about today's ride was the wind being a right bastard!

Had a couple of moments, due to lack of experience in those conditions.

Also, promised you a photo for the name, but I forgot to take one with my helmet off.

So here are a couple.

First is a few years old but funny none the less (real too!)

The second is about 2 years old but is one of the few I have.

Finally, the third I took about 2 minutes ago, .

... I wonder if anyone else is brave enough to post a picture of themselves? .. hmm, could make a good thread; probably is one already.. lol

Dude, you lost some weight there. Your face is a lot skinnier.

That's the biggest crotch rocket I've seen.

Aye, tell me about it.

Had an operation on my lung since it popped. Lost loads of weight in hospital.

At the moment I only weigh 11 and a bit stone .

Seeing a dietitian so hopefully I can raise it up.

Edited: typo's.

Nice bike, not very powerful considering the engine size (I was expecting more than what it produces, still ample enough though) but I can see its chucks out a lot of torque. Sounds great as well.

How's the Buell overall, in terms of economy, maintenance, etc? I've been looking at Harley's, and Victory's for a while, but there's something about Buell that I like, and I am considering something like the 'Blast' just to tool around town. However, it's hard to get real opinions around my area, because few people here own them.

It gets about 50 mpg stock, with my exhaust mod it gets about 40 mpg but about 25 more HP. Its alot of fun to ride and make the kids around here look like fools on their little 600cc bikes. There are only two people that ride Buell Firebolts within 500 miles of according to the H.O.G. registry. It performs extremely well, like I said no one on a foreign bike except for the GSXR1000's and the Busas can compete with me. Handles turns extremely well do to center mounted exhaust. All around fun (fast) bike.

I am so jealous..

But please, don't forget I am 19 and this is my first bike. For a first bike, I think a 600cc is quite on the big side of engines.

Love the look of buell's..

My dad is restoring a 1974 Kawasaki KZ900. It has a 160 speedo, and the guy that my dad bought it from said that he took it that fast. The gear ratio on that thing is insane. But they didn't put it on the KZ1000. If they did, it would have kicked the 900s ass so bad. $4500 and you can have it.

*the carbs need major cleaning, the shims need to be redone, and one of the exhaust looks like crap.
