I could build that for slightly more than $1000.

$1600 would get me something far greater than what you're offering there.

Well I Tried To Convince Him not to sell it because of the game Battle Feild Bad Company he was waiting for it, but his car died on him or something and now he has been without a car for like 8 weeks now and he needs a new car or a new engine I think.

Shit, I wouldn't sell a great PC like like that just to repair a car, find money else where or get a job or something.

That is a great PC, it be like selling your girl friend, you just don't do it.

Good luck through.

I think not, I think. However, I think that I think that we don't really allow renegadeforums.com to be used to buy/sell stuff because I think that's not what it's made for, I think.

I think you should try e-bay, I think, don't you think?

I'd be amazed if he got more then $900 for it.

Computers like that aren't very hard to come by. Being that it's used brings down its value quite a bit.

Fry's computer? Never heard of them. Chances are they have very little buying power. Hate to say it but your friend most likely overpaid for a lot of stuff. It's just how the economy is setup.

I priced out laptops at a local "specialty" computer shop. WAY overpriced. stuff with one gig of ram, 15" monitor and single core processor was listed at $999.

Trolls slip up.

awesome.

a computer is like a car, brand new it's expensive, a few days old and it's worth nothing.

I think you are fucking stupid for using the phrase "I think" in every sentence.

He could have built that brand new for no more then $1200... So asking for $1600 is not really gonna get him anywhere, I think.
