Yes here is a pic of a bmp file and if you look closely you can see the flag in the pics

Now im going to change it to jpg just so i can upload it here but the real image is in bmp.

Here prof that it is in bmp format.

2) untitled.JPG, downloaded 569 times

Just because the image used transparent layers when it was originally created does not mean the BMP file itself has transparency. The alpha layer information was lost when it was saved in a format (BMP) which does not support it.
