Its even more funnier if you act as you believe it, but then fake the guy who tries to. They are mostly African people who try this, to get money of you.

There are even sites about faking the guys who try this to people over the world.

Oh, sorry for the weird sentence.

How do I know that those E-mails are (mostly) from Africa? I don't remember the site names, but there are sites where they trick those people. Tricking them by asking pictures from those people (the E-mail senders) with them on it, with weird english words on a piece of paper they have to hold.

They ask such pictures, so that they 'believe' the E-mail is real. On most of the pictures, you can see black people, mostly African people.

the other day my parents called me and said we won a laptop from this website and all we need to give them is our names age and addresses... i gave them a long speech about it... just like the long speeches i used to get from them when they caught me smoking in my youth.

it was a nice way to get back at them for all the bitching i gout while growing up, this time i got to use phrases like smarten up and the famous "do you really believe everything people tell you".

it was nice

I just cant wait until the "One Laptop Per Child" program picks up.

Search for "Haxial" from Haxial.net and how he screwed with one of these scammers. He even sent the guy a photoshopped passport of James T. Kirk and the dummy never caught on until the end, when he sent pics of his "murdered wife" in the bathtub (She was 'snooping around') and he needed to get the money NOW and was leaving the country. After the scammer didnt reply, he emailed back "I have a bathtub waiting for you!"

Funny how this is still around after all these years. I bet the scammers are scamming other wanna-be scammers by selling them scammer templates and email lists.

"You cant con an honest man". Read a book (biography) called "The Yellow Kid" about a guy named Weil. Everything in the movie "The Sting" was taken from that book. VERY funny scams. Outrageous!

Quote:How would you like to make $75 - $250 every single day just for clicking your mouse ?

This program is a MUST for:

Stay at home moms or dads
People who are retired
Anyone who needs extra money but has little time to spend
Students who need extra income
Anyone who needs to stay home but needs an income

Many people ask me everyday - "Sebastian, there are so many 'make money on the net' guides out there - which one shall I buy - which one really brings in mon.ey - I finally want to start making mon.ey on the net".

Don't believe any hyped promises - you won't be making thousands of dollars every day and you won't be a millionaire by next year but my System is a surefire method for everyone who wants to start earning online ".

All you have to do is click your mouse!

I will give you access to surveys that only take 15 minutes to complete and you will make an average $25 - $250 per survey. You will even get paid to watch movie trailers or to drive your car!

You will earn $10 - $50 per movie trailer that you preview - and up to $500 per week for driving your car!

Hi Sebastian,

This is John Denton calling you from Naples, FL and I just wanted to let you know that this is by far the best system I've seen for making money with internet surveys.

You've really gone out and did some due dilligence in finding the best companies out there to offer these and that in itself is worth far more than the price you're giving this information out for.

I can't believe you don't keep this stuff to yourself but we're sure happy that you're sharing it with us!

Thank you Sebastian for yet again another very very easy, fun and profitable program that we can all do.

ClickedCash is definately the cream of the crop in my book when it comes to paid surveys.

One that some people fall for is a "real" check they receive.

Often its a "Loan for college". The person is sent a VERY REAL looking check, by certified mail, with an amount OVER what they ask for, and is told to cash the check, and wire the difference in cash back to the scammer.

The person cashes the check, and the bank APPROVES it, because banking methods in the USA are archaic and backwards, and security is lax (This is documented by the FBI, they are sick of having to take cases because the bank wasnt careful). The person uses the fake money in their account to wire the transfer for the accidental "overpayment" to the scammer.

30 to 90 days later, when the bank finally finds out the check was no good, they tell the victim "Your check was no good, we'd like our $30,000 immediately".

One person I have read of in the newspaper could have faced jail time for fraud - and she was the victim in this same scheme.

So, which one of you Forum guys are sending me these checks?

I often reply to those E-mails with fake stuff, and eventually send em a picture of something 'Fail'. One of those senders even emailed me back, asking what a 'Failboat' picture had to do with 'the case', and convincing me 'the case' wasn't fake (I emailed him a picture of a failboat).

OOH YEAH. I'M TOTALLY CONVINCED NOW THAT I NEED YOUR SOFTWARE.

Maybe you got lucky with that popup (the creator wasn't that smart) but in any case most of those popups clicking anywhere on it is like clicking "Yes", tbh I would scan your computer with a 'good' scanner just in case

Can anyone tell me what this guy was smoking when he sent me this email?

A Stupid Idiot, Apparently A seagull screamed back at him. The crowd began to stir, like men waking from a dream. Each man
