The idea seems to be to actually try and give these people a fair trial.

If these prisoners feel that they can take away our rights to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, their rights should be taken away.

I don't get why he wants to shut it down. Where are we going to torture terrorists for information and lulz then? Seems like a lot of work to move everything and do it somewhere else when we have a perfectly good facility already.

seems like obama is clinging to his communist agenda by supporting human rights.

Next thing you know it he'll legalize fag marriage federally.

Yeah like that 14 year old Canadian, who had gone to Guantanamo without a trial. Now he has the opportunity to kill us all!

WTF are the Geneva Conventions anyway? Let's waterboard some randomers, sounds far more fun to me. Don't forget to deny them a fair trial though, that's what makes it fun for all the family.

guantanamo is nothing but a rallying cause for terrorists anyway. shutting it down is an exercise in american principles and virtue i guess some people here don't care about the suspension of habeus corpus? if we have evidence against an individual, let's fucking hear it in court.

Well it is very good that they are shutting it down. As far as I know America only uses it for purposes of using dehumanising behavior. Seems like they borrowed some techniques from the 1940's.

Seriously what does a modern country want with it?

Terrorists aren't exactly the most well informed of people. They could still make up shit about these places existing and people would believe them.
