Renhelp is now back, though known as renegadehelp.net now. The layout has changed a bit but all the old content should still be there and its function has remained the same -> help all the Renegade modders around here. It also contains some tutorials for APB (A Path Beyond) and Reborn.

True! I like it because it now really is 'Renegade'

The images are now fixed, problem was we needed the RenHelp.NET domain to point to the server, it is now and the correct folders have been moved in line with the image links, so everything shows.

Also the downloads on tuts should also work.

And of cause not everyone is going to like the new style, can't please everyone, but this is what we went with and are happy with.

The Renegade style is the official skin from Westwood for Renegade and it's fitting to honour the game with the same style just like RenegadeCom and RenegadeForums.com does.

Preferred the old theme, was clean and simple and didn't draw attention away from the content. For sites such as this simple, clean layouts without graphical junk everywhere are much preferable. Flash banners and fancy menus just make it excessively bandwidth heavy.

Can't remember where I said this, but it also looks quite stretched in comparison to RenCom. It seems as if the banner was attempted to be centered to hover over the main content and the main content looks like it wants to stretch over creating a horizontal scrollbar. I like the initiative, but the old one looks better and nicer on the eyes imo. Also, the new site has less tutorials than the original. What happened there? :/
