The mammoth is one of the most square vehicles in the game.. By the laws of physics, an object on 2 treads parallel to each other will turn at a speed closer to it's maximum speed moving forward. But when the Mammoth turns on it's center axis with 1 thread forward, the other in reverse, it turns incredible slow compared to moving forward. The mammoths biggest weakness is infiltry running along it's side.. they are to close for tguns to shot, and turning is to slow. Mammoth is a good unit.. but for 1500 it's arse. And who ever says it is worth the money plays against nothing but newbies that don't know how to move forward and back to dodge fire(which the mammothc an't do) and is probly playing on servers that give 999999creds at start.Increasing Mammoths normal turning speed would improve it, and make it obey the laws of physics the mammy works quite well, just not on its own just send 2 guys in meds in front of it, noddies will take on the meds, then the mammy will kick em from a distance...and oh yes, cheese, we basically have the same member numbers [April 16, 2002: Message edited by: Havock]

Only off by about 10,000.And the mammy is good for certain situations, like hammering a base or providing support fire. It's not a good combat unit - only good at taking out bad drivers and bases. Only bases, not too good
