You have viruses, that explains anything, really.

I had this same kind of problem going 2 years ago
I used Avast! to scan my computer
Found out there was adware and spyware

When you have something that nasty, the best remedy is to back up all your important data to a USB drive or some CDs/DVDs or something and then completely reinstall Windows, to get rid of the viruses.

I had a virus recently and did exactly that (went and bought an external hard drive, copied everything to it and reinstalled Windows)

Yes

But my brothers best way to do it is reformat your hard drive

Goz edit: plz don't give that kind of advise...
...Followed by a reformat. That'll give you a clean start. Next time, go easy on the warez and pr0nz.
