Good games, everyone! We ended up playing 13v13, and surprisingly the renegadeforums team won . The games were very enjoyable, hard fights . I was very impressed with the level of team work this team pulled off.

Thanks to the Jelly team and thanks to Kips and Mike who played for our team to even up teams .

I would like my 100$ payment now.

I'll also take radios money since its his fault we lost one round.

Excellent games; I was extremely impressed by our level of teamwork. I thought Jelly would take the win.

The renforums team won 4-1.

First map Canyon. I can't say what happened right at the beginning because my renegade crashed and I had to restart... still. I rejoined, the field was being contested pretty seriously, although Jelly (GDI) had the upper hand a little. Then they took out the hand and refinery... gj getting in, frankly.

We tried taking the field back, but they just kept us in check with meds and mummies, eventually winning on points with an intact base vs our airstrip.

Second map was the first ever (as far as i know) test of Hourglass2. i.e. hourglass without the hill. We rushed the hill with MRLS's straight away and smashed up the obelisk in the first few minutes.... lovely stuff. The rest of the game consisted of continual fights for the hill and the side paths, GDI eventually winning by about 10000 points. I love the map fix. I've never liked Hourglass but it's pretty nice with the bug fixed. GDI certainly has a fairer time on the hill.

Volcano. Everyone went tunnels except for my cunning plan with a teammate (I forget his name, rhymes with Bike i think) to kill the harvester. We succeeded in this scheme, and when our harv dropped, I organised a mass light tank rush since they could not afford anything much. We killed the refinery pretty quickly. They did get a decent rush on the bridges, but we eventually fended them off, then rolled in with teched arties and finished the job. Basekill.

Mesa2. Nod again. Thankfully we got the box, so one of us could get a fast arty on the bridge, a light tank joined him later, the rest of us took the cave. They never took the cave back from us... they did take the bridge briefly, but they didn't hold it long. Wasn't too long after that for buildings to start dying... basekill again.

Field. Nod yet again. We had a pretty bad start since I told everyone to focus on defending our harvester, but we failed. Predictably they got a couple of MRLS out there then meds after that. Without the early harv dump we had to get mostly teched arts instead of my usually preferred light tanks, but we eventually took the field... and once we did, we didn't lose it. Killed the WF after a while, then smashed up the AGT thanks to a light tank rush supported by arties. Rolled in, killed the ref, nuked the barracks... gg's.

thanks to everyone who played, very enjoyable. must do them again.

endgame screenshots are in the topic on the jelly forums

<http://jelly-server.com/forums/index.php?/topic/13467-results-jelly-vs-renforums/>

i was surprised at the display of teamwork by the renforums side and liked that Hourglass2 is not a completely nod-favored map

the server was laggy and if in the future we set up another series it will not be like that the sides will switch as well

Whos the main guy to set this up with?

That would be me...

It's quite obvious that there will always be people from different communities playing for renforums as renforums isn't even a seperate Ren community in the first place . I hope the fact we actually pulled off to get games will encourage more to sign up next time.

Glad you all had fun! thx for that detailed game summaries, Spooky.

So Gozy, can you please tell me what that "little forum gift" is? Has something to do with this pink letters?

Anyway, really glad to hear Hourglass2 turned out great. Was kinda wondering how it would turn out.

I hope this becomes a regular community event from now on.

i'll go invisible if you make me a cool sky blue color

i had fun playing with a different group of players, even if i had to watch my own community lose in doing so

Spoony did a good job leading the renforums team; without him i don't think the team could have been successful

Goztow wrote on Sat, 23 January 2010 17:57TD wrote on Sat, 23 January 2010 23:50Spoony, you had Mike, liquid and another jelly guy on your team and you know more than anyone about pointfixed maps and the hg2 and mesa2 maps than anyone.

How can you even sperm over this win? Zell left early in the game and RC wasnt even on TS for 3 maps. It was basically me and t0rn trying to lead the game with people that probaly never played pointsfix OR knew the difference between hourglass and hourglass2, and how to PLAY on it.

.. gg's, it was a fun lobby war

I don't think anyone is bragging over anything. Yes: we had 2 unplanned players to even up teams but it was also the first time we ever put these 13 people in one team and you had the home advantage. And it's obvious u didn't show up with your strongest players, but who really cares? In the end, it doesn't matter who won, but that it were friendly games with a lot of sportsmanship.

I hope we can organize some more of these games sooner or later.

Uhm it does matter who won. Renforums!

gj guys.

Normally you use the spoony to feed yourself...

But on Renforums you feed the spoony, and then it excretes long winded post containing mass quotes. Use the damn fork next time.
