Dubstep? Ugh - it sounds like angry Transformers having sex. Definitely not my thing.

This is what I'm listening to lately:

Lights Out Asia - Knock Knock

Need a Name - On the Horizon of Faith

Jon Hopkins - Light Through the Veins

Carbon Based Lifeforms - Euphotic

Been listening to a lot of oldies and such. Got back into the guitar and my roommate plays the bass.

Cracker - Low

Eric Clapton- Cocaine

Rolling Sly Stone - Red Hot Chili Peppers

Doors

Bob Dylan

Lots of shit

@caveman I thought all your songs sounded like shit until I got drunk and listened to them again.

My issue with dubstep isn't that it's fundamentally "bad", just that every song is identical to the previous one. They all have the same beats and same styles. The first dubstep songs were great, but like rap music, once it became popular it stopped being unique and quickly became a medium where the same beats became mass-market bullshit.

I've been into Space music for a while now. I end up listening to DI.FM's Space Dreams channel most of my day. To understand my tastes in music, I generally enjoy what's difficult to find. To that end, I find myself enjoying most indie music, regardless of its genre - it's fresh and exciting. Not at all like most things I've heard on the radio waves for the past 15 years. There's something about space music that just really helps my mood and helps me focus on my work, though.

You should expand your horizons. Frank's work is great in its own way, but there's a lot more to experience.

/Deadmau5 is best at trance. Nothing sounds unique in "dubstep" so he just sounds like everyone else when he tries it.

He plays "neo-trance" as well. Which I just classify as trance. When I hear his work on Di.fm's trance channel, I consider it trance as well.

Noisia - Gutterpump

Noisia has some nice stuff. Some of it's D&B which ends up being a bit too dubstep-y, but songs like that are pretty good.

Buck Tick - Dress

herp derp weeaboo, but goddamn dat bass.

Buck Tick - Kuchizuke

Actually, Buck Tick is a pretty damn good band as far as I've seen- they have a pretty wide variety (despite their overly goth visuals). Although, the videos end up being creepy (in an undesired way).

Parov Stelar - Catgroove

Parov Stelar is definitely "niche" music, in that it's modern dance/electronica/whatever mixed with older swing dance style (amongst others, but don't feel like going into specifics). But dayum, it's catchy stuff.

sorry if my tastes aren't hipster and/or WOBWOBWOB enough, but you'll like the way it sounds. I guarantee it.

BTW, Anyone know the author and track name of this soundtrack:

Women in the IDF video with French rap

If anyone is decently at French, could you pull out some sentence so it might be searchable on lyric sites. I've tried to but I'm only getting person names and some random words... The rest is too fast.

Avalon (Original Mix) by Biru

Found this absolute bomber; another version. I am kinda going back to the badass slow-paced trance songs I used to listen to.

Keep posting guys; love to listen to what others like.

I've been listening to Eminem and D12 again recently..

D12 Ft Eminem Purple pills
Eminem - Till I collapse

I could simply post alot more, but I cant be arsed.
These are the 2 most recent ones.

Indeed, I personally am not interested in random YT links, unless I have an idea what I'll be listening to.

I'm currently listening to a presentation about the usefulness of Business Intelligence.

BOMBER track I found last week; have listened to it more than 50 times now and yet to get bored.

OK, I have listened to so many Trance songs with cute female vocal lines but this one is probably the best ever! Such silky smooth voice, amazing buildup, superb tune. Wish there were more lines...

^ very nice, thanks for sharing

I found another awesome song; this tune never gets boring!

Peter Gabriel - Deep Forest (EARTH DAY)

But disregard the eco-terrorist message that falsely accuses the common people of the crimes of the industrialists, oil barons, and corporate mineral miners.

edit:

from the video description:

"Earth need protection from all of us !!"

lol, no it doesn't fuckhead. Blame the real criminals.

Not much has changed. More music, but still mostly rock, a bit of metal and some punk.

Almost Easy - Avenged Sevenfold?

Rock songs are still mostly my favourites.

Also I would consider Dairy of Jane to be metal. Wikipedia says alternative metal so whatever.
