I've never asked about meatballs as a side, but I don't think they do serve nachos at all.

A travesty, I say- I demand a worldwide boycott of subway until they introduce the Nacho Sandwich.

Subway sucks. They never put enough of anything on their sandwiches.

And why would renowned "diet" chain serve meatballs and nachos?

I am not aware of Subway selling Nachos at all, but they do have meatballs for a sub. Not sure if you can get them on the side though.

yeah the marinara

but here they do a bowl of meatballs as a side, or a box of nachos with all the extras.

My lunch today (along with a spicy chicken thingy from Gregg's, who are trying to take over the world btw). Meatballs in the bowl, under the cheese.

There should be an "Urgently Important Discussions" forum section for this sort of thing.

Yea you won't see that in canada either, no nacho sides or meatballs in a box. The meatballs from subway are gross, and i wouldn't want them on the side anyways. Nachos from subway look pretty dull anyways, they better be cheap lol.

Yeah, we don't have sides of meatballs or nachos like that. Weird. I don't really go to Subway because we have much better quality places for the same price or cheaper.

Subway is misleading. You walk into the store and it smells really nice. But when you get your food, you're like "Wtf happened?!"

I eat at subway alot, not because I like to be a health nut.. because its a lot of food for $5. They don't have that here that I have ever seen. For all we know over in china they probably serve rice on the side.

There's been a huge uprising in places that not only bake their own bread, but also slice your meat and cheese right when you order and everything is much fresher and better tasting than Subway crap. And you can get a larger sub for almost the same price... sometimes cheaper.

Not great ones. I usually get my sub sandwiches from Publix and they just heap on the ingredients I ask for. Much cheaper than Subway (by at least $1) with included drink/chips and a hell of a lot more value for your money. I don't hate Subway but Publix just does it right.

the subs/wraps are a bit of a ripoff for what you get, but the meatballs and nachos are pretty good.

gregg's is probably the best overall option during the daytime; at evening, we have an excellent selection of foreign takeaways. no mexican, alas; pretty much anything else.

There should be an "Urgently Important Discussions" forum section for this sort of thing. even american diet laws prohibit the hiding of ominous meatballs under a thick layer of artificial cheese

Which sandwiches are you getting? I spend at least $2 more at Publix for a similar sandwich. Publix tends to have less topping choices, too.

I actually work at subway, we normally don't have meatballs or nachos as a side(although some subways do nachos and/or pizza). also, why are you saying they don't give you enough toppings? just ask for more...

but to be fair, my subway is regarded pretty highly, some people have said that they've been to several subways in different states even, and that ours has the best service and quality. so I guess I don't speak for most of them

I drive 2 and a half hours each way for their sandwiches regularly. I've never found anything that's even in the same class. My families been going there since they opened and it's kind of a tradition.
