I was shooting at the harv in an mlrs and it fell through the ground when a light tank shot at it. I was stuck there in my nearly dead mlrs, spinning:

I got out to see if I could get out of there:

I started falling and falling, then I saw my mlrs in the distance coming towards me. I decided to repair it for no real reason and got stuck in it:

Anyone have any explanation? I had to commit suicide to get out of there.

try using C4 and sometimes that works instead of commiting suicide. Someone told me that when I was having issues with the "virtual void of wierd gliches" try it next time that happens.

that almost happened to me today, too. i also managed to pick up a second auto rifle, so i could switch between the two at will.

It happend again just a while ago, and i was in a mammy when it fell. I was able to see the map and move around a little. I thought it would be cool to appear in the back of the nod base and kill some building, but i was moving so slow i had to commit suicide and lose over 6000 credits.
Here's the screenies:

This is known as "Blue Hell" As I have come to understand. It is an evil place you get stuck in from time to time that makes you lose all your credits by suiciding unless you can use c4 skillfully.

Every time I go to "Blue Hell", it reminds me of The Twilight Zone

I've gone on mesa and under, both time in a vehicle, but one time it blew up and the other time it didnt. Has anyone ever gone as infantry?

I was in "blue hell" once. On under I was an APC (Nod) and was waiting for people to get in. I was waiting for a while and got bored, so I started doing donuts, and then next thing I know I'm below the map boundaries, watching the map get smaller, and smaller. How I got out was getting out of my APC, then waiting for a few minute, thenI just appeared back in base.
