man, I respect the fact that he died...But why should I cry, I don't even know him, should I cry all the time because 2 persons I don't know died every single minute?

And he is not my brother, indeed, he was a great figure in this community, but he's still not my brother.

And finally , about the hell case ; how so? I'm not even christian, but you're , and calling me names will make you go to your fantastic hell.

Quote:Whatever...I never heard of him before.

Like you Aprime, I never heard of TreyD. However, in reading post of all those who did know him, he obvioulsy was a good guy. Further, in reading all the post, the guy had family who obvioulsy may read these post. If you indeed are respectful person, you would be best served to watch what you say in here for that reason.

Even though you say you respect him, your statements may be interpreted differently. Especially by those who really were close to the man. So, my suggestion to you is maybe pay more attention to what you write. This really isn't a time to be flaming people for trying to respect someone they were close to. What if Trey's wife reads the stuff you wrote - I mean think a bit.

Empathy to those who were close to TreyD.

You deserve a great big kick in the balls...wait nevermind you have none and saying that just proves and then when you're in this community he is, was, and forever shall be your brother until you leave this community.

If you never heard of him then you could just ignore this thread.

TreyD was a cool guy and will be missed.
