I remember when this topic was common at the old Renegade forums; it would appear it hasn't surfaced in awhile since then - at least a couple months. I just finished my desktop overhaul with a new visual style and dock, and I was curious as to what others' desktops look like now...

General: http://aspenth.com/aspndesktopjune1.jpg

And these other two are just images of the dock in action...

lmao..thats an easy one...you kill the axis..you keep the gun controls destroyed and you also stop the axis loading the amunition onto the train...okie?...its easy man

i love that game i just need a new sound card as my onboardsound lags me

It's a replica dock for Windows; docks are common on all Mac OS X systems. The one I have is the Y'Z Dock, which can be downloaded here.

In order for them to look as intended, you'll need to search for high quality PNG files to be the icons. One example is this one of mIRC. (I chose this one to show because for those of you who decide to download the dock, I know mIRC is a commonly used program here; it can be used at will)

If you desire more, check the Neowin Forums. They have quite a collection in that thread.

How exactly do you take a pic of your desktop? Then where is it found?

Subject: Classic Topic: Desktops

Well you see that button called "Print Screen" or "SysRq" above the insert key on your keyboard, believe it or not it takes a screenshot of anything on the screen at the time your press it. Then go into a paint application and click "paste" or press Ctrl+V and watch the sccreen fill with the screen shot you took, save it as a compressed pictrue format such as the Joint Photographic Experts Group format (JPEG for short) and then upload it onto the internet using free webspace or a convinient website such as n00bstories image uploader.

I am not liable for any misuse of the "Print Screen" and/or the "SysRq" button on any keyboard. use it at your own risk, I am not liable for any damage caused by the use of this button and/or conent created.

Ah thanks. I knew about the print screen (I'm not THAT dumb) I just didn't realize that you had to paste it afterwards, I thought it got saved to a folder. So when that didn't work, I thought that maybe I was missing something that also needed to be done to take a pic.

Anyways, here's mine

You'll see a classy wallpaper and my minimal desktop - the way it should be.

http://www.thecodesmith.com/download/pictures/desktop (17th June 2003).gif

Does anyone else agree that it's really stressful having more than 1-5 icons on the desktop? I just find it stressful and i can't seem to concentrate with whatever i'm doing.

Ah well, just my two pennies.

lol, funny how i suggested that when i was moaning to you about it 4 hours ago... but hey, it's still a really fucking bad bug in phpBB.

Even if you encase the whole URL with the your url here tags, it STILL doesn't realise it's a whole address if there's a single space.

I can understand it not working if you just paste a URL into a thread without using the URL tag brackets, but when it happens with them it's just completely moronic.

Crimson, if possible could you fix this php code yourself, or may i moan directly to the authors of phpBB?

Copy the link all the way to the .gif that's on the same line, don't just add .gif to the existing link that phpBB has already fucked up.

Its the beta version and one goes straight to the planetside.exe which was used to get past a login bug. I don't have to install the game once I get it due to the fact that the beta will update to release version.
