Remember, it's please, not plz.
Remember, it's I, not i.
Remember, it's Renegade, not renegade.
Remember, it's e-mail, not email.
Remember, it's "it's," not "its" in this particular situation.

Hope you can type that HTML coding without as many mistakes as you've made here.

If you have Either Microsoft word, or Microsoft front page, you can make websites in those, I think the latest version of word. You could also use Notepad, or Wordpad.

You can do a right click on any web page and view the source to get ideas just remember use your own ideas and not someone else.

Post what you did here then I or someone else will be able to point out what you did wrong. Don't give up, learn what mistake you did and then you can fix it.

http://www.htmlgoodies.com has easy-to-browse FAQ-type questions and answers on the basics, so if you run into a problem, that site can probably help you.

I just use Notepad when coding HTML, but Dreamweaver is a compiler that a lot of people I know use. It's not free though, so you'd have to buy it.

I'd recommend just learning to hard-code HTML and do it in Notepad. It's cheap because you don't need to buy a compiler, and you'd be able to use any compiler out there once you knew straight HTML in and out.

No it doesn't mainly because the file is loacted on your computer at "C:\Documents and Settings\Cynde\My Documents\My Music\Eminem\The Marshall Mathers LP\18 Criminal.wma" You need to upload the file and specify "18 Criminal.wma" as the filename.

Also I'd get some hosting that doesn't put banners and popups all over your site. There are loads of free hosting without banners try looking on http://clickherefree.com
