Look for backup files in the autoback directory. They are in wierd formats.

Also, try merging or X-refing the files.

Gmax>autoback

Make sure that you are displaying all files, you may find somebackups.

Yeah, your files are corrupted.

Did you download any Windows patches or updates recently?

All you have to do to restore a backup gmax file is to simply Open the .gx or .bak file from the 'autoback' folder under Gmax, you don't need to do anything special like merge or x-ref. Just keep opening the backup files until you find the most recent and functional one.
