I've decided to uninstall renegade and all of my mods, and have moved on. I just got C&C Generals: Zero Hour and thats what i'm playing now. What games do you think are worth uninstalling quitting renegade for, and do you think you will buy generals or any other EA C&C game?

BTW: I play C&C Generals because of its C&C like game play and i dont give a crap about its story line because its game play compinsates.

Is there a reason you can't have more than one game on your computer?

I got Ren, Generals, BF1942, and a bunch of other games that I never play on this computer. When I run out of space I'll uninstall some of them, probably starting with Worms, I don't think I'll ever get low enough where I can't have all my favorites on the hard drive.

So ... uh .... no game is worth uninstalling Ren for.

And the question that's on everyones mind... Who the hell cares?

Other EA CnC games? Generals is the first CNC game made by EA. How could there be others?

Well. Do you think anyone wants to hear that you quit renegade?

Go have fun with generals. All you ever did was bitch and complain anyway.

Good riddance

Well I have a GRX500 Sony vaio laptop 2001 20gb hard drive, and only 3gb of free space left. Got it? I's better to delete the lest used game than to waste space.

I think EA will make more C&C titles in the future due to "ZERO HOUR".

I fail to see

- why anyone would uninstall/quit Renegade
- why anyone would deliberately install Generals

Lol...

- To reinstall it maybe? / You'd have to quit after your parents found out that you're playing a game that is too violent for you...
- Maybe they thought it was an actual Command and Conquer game? Maybe they like playing games that have absolutely no creativity or story to it? Maybe they just needed something to laugh at and some money to waste?

What is violent about Renegade? I mean you get killed or shot by a big laser and you respawn back at your base and start again.

The Sims is a much more violent game, I mean you can set off fireworks indoors and watch your sims burn to death because you forgot to place a door.
