Sure it might not have been a JPEG the first time before you uploaded it?

n00bstories only lets you upload .gif and .jpeg. it was not a bmp or bitmap well and it lets you uplaod png but it is a jpeg. thayt is only 36kb but then everyone says it is over 90kb when they look at. but then when they save it goes back to 36kb.

I save all images as jpegs but I don't actually change the file at all... image headers are weird.

I'd actually prefer you not store your forum signature images in there anyway... I had to pay $90 in bandwidth charges because of all these people who don't use it like it's intended.

what about the image hosted by thing in the bottom corner? Why did you decide to put that in there?

Because I figured if the images are going to use 30-35 gigabytes of bandwidth per month, I ought to get some users out of it.

To show who the image is hosted by. If you don't like it than you can either get it hosted by someone else or get a premium account with n00bstories.com .

No, I don't have unlimited anymore. I get 50 gigs per month on that server.

And as someone mentioned, yes, images hosted by premium account holders don't get the watermark.
