Noticed a little while ago, that no emoticon smilies are animating here... it's just this website.

 :rolleyes:

These two in particular, i'm sure they used to animate. Weird thing is, they animate just fine when i save them to my computer.

On other sites, GIFs animate perfectly.

The ad blocking may stop some animations.

In the ad blocking section, it auto disables animation. Go into options and re-enable them, but you can still keep the ad-blocking enabled.

SeaManBut that thing is not free.. unless you want ads.

A standard ad banner at the top right is barely noticable. I have the registered version. There is little difference.

I guess I should install Opera again, I uninstalled it in favor of MyIE2, but it's gay and screwed up after a while.

I think it goes done to what browser you use. Also, Zone Alarm is crap, I hate it, and it kept blocking sites so I got rid of it.

Just use google tool bar

A) It's Free
B) It blocks spammy pop-ups and not important stuff
C) If it blocks important stuff just CTRL-click the link again
D) No spyware
E) You get to use Google without going to http://www.google.com (yah, big woop, I know)

This is based on you having Microsoft Internet Explorer. Tools > Internet Options > Advanced > Multimedia (List) > Play Animations In Web Pages (check the box) this should solve your problem. May need to restart your browser though or press F5.

I use Internet Explorer on my windows machine and Mozilla on my Red Hat Linux machine. There quite similar, mozilla having the ad blocker built in, but it lacks some shortcuts of IE and doesn't support my 5 mouse buttons without using another app.

Shit > Google Toolbar > Planetside

I use MyIE2 with Ad hunter and zonealarm pro w/ web filtering. I have never had a pop-up in my life. Google toolbar just pissed me off when I tried it.

I can't understand why that option would be turned off, i don't recall doing it myself...
