The Community
After being 'pre-opend' for two weeks The Community is finnaly officialy opend!
The Community is a forum having great potential to become maybe one of the biggest 'all subject' forums on the web!
We offer a great deal of boards for you to share your interests with others and discuss news related items, how about these: Reading/books, Movies, Games, Music, Computer, Writing and ofcourse the Art Corner. But if those all aint your thing then you can always get back to the main chatting area and talk about the lovely weather outside .

Being one of the few, TC offers a non subject restrickted RPG board. Meaning you may create RPG worlds that don't neccecerily are linked to fantasy or stuff like that. In addition to that we already have put up an RPG in which everyone may join (more on that on the site).

When we grow we will also expand, getting a main web page, more advanced forum host and game servers for verius first persone shooting games like counter strike and C&C Renegade. But we will need your help though.

Still want to know more about us? Then I suggest you take a peek at all the discussions currently going and register if you want to! We need your help to become big!

Congradulations, you are the 440th person today to use a free forum/subdomain combo and actually believe it grow. :rolleyes:

I agree with what ACK said this time.

And also SS217.

Using a free forum and free subdomain service, I don't see how anyone would really get hyped up about this.

Yet another generic forum that will die within a year...

There are already too many "general discussion" forums that have developed communities to be starting one now. Should have hopped on the bandwagon 4 years ago.

My website is in my signature. Even if those are just links, it is still better than looking all over the web for renegade mods.

I figured I would get a lot of 'your spamming!' reactions if I made a nother post... so Il just bumb this one.
And BTW, for a site to be succesfull it doesnt have to have a .com addres. Where the hell did you get that idea? A site can't be succesfull over a days time. Il get myself a .com addres as we grow becouse I dont want to trow away my money!

Other than that, you could at least visit and take a look. Instead of drilling me into the ground without even having seen it.

How are you going to handle the traffic when it expands? Will you be able to support it finacially? What makes you think this forum is special and is going to attract people? Over 24 days and you still don't have 20 members? Not looking good, buddy.

Moving to a bigger host when the time come's, Yes I will, becouse Iv'e been looking all over the net for a forum that offers things like this. I havnt found a thing. My forum is more then a place to chat and discuss, its gonna be a place where members are actualy interactive with the site.

Ive been away for a week or 2, so in that time I could advertise. But even then, you can't get a million ppl to visit and register in one month. That will take more then a month. It will take multiple months before the forum is actualy on the role. Thats the case with every new starting site.

You're using a pre-made skin, show some dedication and make your own.
Forums are boring there's no way forums can have the funcationality of a website, they're meant for interaction and discussion not spamming to upgrade your stupid RPG characters.

However I totally agree with you about not needing a .com. In the past the CNC Community was hosted mainly on subdomains and it was very popular. However, nowadays .coms are only £6/year (less than 2 hours work @ min. wage) so while they aren't required they do show that you are prepared to spend money on your site (and therefore you are dedicated to it).

I have 2 rules about forums:
1. Using the default skin = cya
2. RPG add-on = cya.

Well those are your rules and do not nececerely have to be the ones of someone els. About the Skin your right, and you realy think im going to leave it that way?? Ive been working on a good skin from day one, Im still working on it as we speak. I just wanted to open the site in advance to get it running (which might not have been such a good idea afterwards... I admit.) But still, Im planning to make this a working community which is going to get know one way or another. May take 3 months, may take 3 years... butt we are going to get there.

Im starting to wonder who is the actual spammer here... me or you guys...
I remember there was a time here on the forums when you could just post a stupid non working site up and still get norml feedback over it. Are those days past?
Instead of telling: THIS WILL NEVER WORK!
Ppl used to say: You might try this and that to make it work, but I doubt it will Sorry dude. But good luck on it anyways...
Luckely those kind of forums still exicst....

Anyway, to get back on topic. All you guys with the big mouths might want to check the site once again. It had a few update's.
http://www.thecommunity.has.it

And if your thinking about only posting negative comment on the banner, then just don't post. I know it needs work.
